NEWPORT POLICE CLOSE ON TRAIL OF OELRICHS

IN JOYOUS ANTICIPATION OF THE HARVEST TO COME

$15,000 JEWEL THIEF

Ready to Make Arrest, Chief McManus Says, as Soon as Mr. Oelrichs Arrives in City. Jewels Taken from Case in Bedroom.

NEWPORT, July 12.—Newport police hope to make an arrest in connection with the theft of $15,000 worth of Mrs. Charles M. Oelrichs's jewels, after they have consulted with Mr. Oelrichs. He has been telegraphed for, and will arrive in Newport from New York this evening.

"It's an inside job. I feel sure of that," said Chief of Detectives McManus, who is a retired detective sergeant of New York, to a reporter of the BOSTON AMERICAN to-day.

So certain was he that someone familiar with the inside of the house knows more about the robbery than has been told, that he spent the night at the Oelrichs villa, and put servants through a severe ordeal of questioning.

This questioning was directed especially at Carl Anderson, the butler who, as the head of the servants, is to an extent responsible for their movements. Mr. McManus said to-day that Anderson withstood the cross-questioning perfectly, and showed a desire to aid in every way in his power in the recovery of the gems.

THREE SERVANTS IN HOUSE.

These are the circumstances that convince the police that the jewels were stolen by some one who not only had access to the house, but was familiar with Mrs. Oelrichs's jewels and knew which of her collection were real and which imitation.

Three servants were in the house, and not one can recall seeing anyone in hose or grounds who had no business there.

No time was lost by the thief in going to the place where the jewelry was kept—in a drawer in a large, old-fashioned bureau.

None of the imitation jewelry, made to be worn while the original reposed safely in a safe deposit vault was taken. One of Mrs. Oelrich's most valued pieces of jewelry is her diamond dog collar, valued at $75,000. She had a copy of it which could not be distinguished from the original except by an expert. This copy was in a box in the drawer. It was not disturbed. The boxes in which the jewels were kept were taken, indicating to the police that the thief knew from the outside of the cases what their contents were, and carried them away to open them at his leisure.

"NO ARREST TO-DAY."

"I am quite positive," said Chief of Police Crowley this noon, "that there will be no arrest to-day—not until after Mr. Oelrichs's arrival to-night, anyway."

The robbery was a particularly bold one. It took place while Mrs. Oelrichs and her daughter Blanche were out driving in broad daylight. A diamond tiara, a rope of pearls a number of rings set with diamonds, emeralds and other precious stones, several brooches, holding a lovers' knot of diamonds, and some jewelled stickpins were taken. But it was thought the job was the act of sneak thieves. Later investigation changed the minds of the police officials as to this point.

The robbery took place between 4 and 6 o'clock. The only persons in the house at the time were the butler and two women servants. The thief is believed to have entered through a long English window which opens on the verandah on the south side of the house. He crossed the drawing room and went up the flight of stairs to Mrs. Oelrich's apartments.

When Mrs. Oelrichs returned from her drive she found her rooms in confusion and the jewels gone. She called the servants, but not one of them had heard anyone in the house during her absence.

Mrs. Oelrichs, when asked about the robbery, refused to talk, saying that the matter was in the hands of the police and that all information must be obtained from them.

The tiara is valued at from $1,000 to $2,000, and the rope of pearls is worth almost as much.

Mrs. Oelrichs's daughter, lately married Peter H. Martin, millionaire horseman and polo player, several years an Mrs. Oelrichs is one of the most beautiful and popular women in society and is greatly distressed by her loss.

Jerome Prepares to Punish Ring for

CRIME IN EQUITABLE

Storm Gathers About Depew's Head on Account of Exposures.

Leaders Alarmed at Prospect of Relentless Prosecution in Sight.

By Boston American Leased Wire.

NEW YORK, July 12.—Every member of the ring which preyed on the Equitable Life Assurance Society is now in danger of relentless criminal prosecution.

District Attorney Jerome is gathering new material from the testimony taken by Superintendent Hendricks and is nearly ready to strike. The State officers are busily preparing evidence and will assist District Attorney Jerome.

There was a hurried conference at Albany last night, and while a legislative investigation is unlikely, the official inquiry is to be pushed rapidly. There is said to be alarm among the Republican leaders because the testimony taken by Superintendent of Insurance Hendricks has exposed Senator Depew. It shows that a large loan was made to a company in which he was interested and that the loan was made on his guarantee. It is also shown in the report that, as counsel for the Equitable, he advised the society that the guarantee he had given was worthless and could never be regarded as binding.

The Senator's friends admit that his position is one that threatens his political career, at least.

Why did Hendricks, in his report, make no reference to this questionable piece of finance? Why, indeed, did the whole Hendricks report dodge vital testimony in the possession of the Superintendent of Insurance, mainly certain individuals liable to prosecution?

Hendricks Makes No Defence.

Superintendent Hendricks, when seen in Albany last night, added nothing to the general knowledge of Equitable conditions.

"You are accused of having suppressed testimony as to Senator Depew's real estate transactions with the Equitable in promulgating your report," it was suggested.

Hendricks looked into vacancy and answered:

"Am I? Who accuses me? Well, I have no reply to make."

"Why did you not call E. H. Harriman as a witness?"

"I have nothing to say about that."

"Complaint is made that you have failed to provide District Attorney Jerome with a copy of the evidence."

"Is that so? I guess he can get a copy without any trouble at my office in New York," was Mr. Hendricks's reply. "Really there is nothing for me to talk about," added Hendricks as he rejoined the Governor and the members of the "House of Lords."

District Attorney Jerome was reticent concerning any action he might take. He said:

"My desire to examine the testimony taken before Superintendent of Insurance Hendricks in the Equitable matter is not from a sociological standpoint to see if any moral obliquity has been disclosed, but to ascertain if the evidence taken is sufficient to warrant the finding of indictments."

ATTEMPTS SUICIDE IN BARBER'S CHAIR

HAL CORDOR, WHO LIVES AT THE BEACON, SLASHES THROAT IN FEDERAL STREET SHOP.

Hal Cordor, a business man, fifty-six years old, and supposed to be a prosperous man who has been living for the past week at the Hotel Beacon, at No. 11 Beacon street, tried to commit suicide to-day in the barber shop of A. T. Maffio in the basement of No. 48 Federal street.

While sitting in a barber's chair Cordor reached over to the barber's stock of razors, selected one and gashed himself three times in the throat. He was removed to the Relief Hospital, where efforts are being made to save his life. He probably will die.

Took Razor From Shelf.

Cordor entered the shop at 8:45 o'clock. After waiting a few minutes he took his seat in the chair of Hugo Grosso, one of the barbers. He had been calling at the shop for a morning shave for the past three or four weeks, but was unknown by name to any of the barbers.

While Grosso was shaving him the man spoke only once.

"How are you getting along," he said to the barber.

"Oh, fairly well," said Grosso.

When the shaving was finished the man handed the barber a quarter, and sat in the chair until Grosso should return with the change. When Grosso had turned his back Anthony J. Mercuda, another barber, saw the man take one of the razors from the shelf in front of the mirror and raise it to his throat.

Fought With Barber.

Mercuda rushed toward the man, but was too late. He had already drawn the blade completely around his throat, and blood was pouring from the wound. The barber tried to take the razor away, but Cordor resisted.

"Let go away," he said, and wrenched at the razor, cutting Mercuda's finger slightly. He then fell to the floor in a pool of blood that had poured from his throat.

A. KEITH DARGANS ENDS LIFE BY CARBOLIC ACID IN SOUTH CAROLINA.

COLUMBIA, S. C., July 12.—A. Keith Dargans, until recently president of the Darlington Trust Company and the South Carolina Independent Oil Company, drank carbolic acid in the presence of his brother-in-law and died soon afterward.

The police say he left a statement saying he had appropriated company funds. The loss is about $800,000.

The Dargans are a prominent family here.

ODESSA COUPLE WED IN BOSTON

The wedding of a couple who came from Odessa was the occasion for a revolutionist meeting and fiery speeches against Russian tyranny in Minot Hall.

Miss Rosaia Tennenblatt and Abraham Sulits were married under the ritual of the orthodox Hebrews and had as guests over six hundred former residents of Odessa. The bride and groom stood under a canopy of flowers and the bridesmaids and ushers were entwined in gay ribbons. Ralph Sulits, brother of the groom, was best man, and Hyman Lorner was toastmaster at the supper which followed the ceremony. There was much gayety and mirth mingled with the denunciations of Russia's oppressions.

List of Gems Stolen From Mrs. Charles M. Oelrichs

Tiara of diamonds, $5,000 to $7,000.

Twelve rings, set with diamonds, pearls and other gems.
Lover's knot of diamonds.
Six brooches, set with diamonds, pearls and emeralds.
Ten or twelve jeweled stick pins.
Total value of all the jewels stolen is upwards of $15,000.

RUSSIA PLANS NEW JEW-BAITING PLOT TO RIVAL KISNINEFF

CZAR'S HIRELINGS INCITE PEOPLE TO REVENGE AGAINST THE HEBREWS.

BERLIN, July 12.—Prominent Jews here have received information that the authorities of Odessa, Russia, are planning a "Jew baiting" on a large scale. M. Kishinowski, a sub-chief of police, is reported to have said to soldiers who returned from the war penniless and who were begging for alms:

"Take what you want from the Jews. You will find plenty of good things to plunder in their houses."

The police in the streets do everything in their power to incite the populace against Jews as they pass by. Official communications designate the Jews as the instigators of the recent riots in Odessa and police agents are systematically endeavoring to incite 20,000 idle longshoremen who are starving because they can not get work to plunder the homes of Jews. A similar official propaganda is going on among the troops with the idea of exciting them to make an attack on the Jews of the city.

Count Ignatieff, in receiving a deputation of Jews from thirty-six towns in southern Russia who came to him to appeal for protection replied to their entreaties by saying:

"The Russian government knows you organized the Odessa revolution, and it will deal with you according to your Old Testament doctrine of an eye for an eye, and a tooth for a tooth."

Jews from southern Russia make an appeal to the entire civilized world, particularly to the press of America, to protect them from the danger which threatens them. It is commonly believed that unless some aid is given the Jews a new outbreak will occur which will rival the horror of Kishineff.

FEAR MUTINY, HOLD FLEET IN PORT

KUSTENDJI, Roumania, July 12.—The Russian fleet is detained here owing to the fear that another mutiny will break out should the vessels put to sea. It is feared that the crews will rise and kill their officers as was done on the Kniaz Potemkin.

The fact that fifty-five sailors from the Potemkin, who surrendered, have been imprisoned on board the different vessels of the squadron awaiting trial, has caused intense indignation among the crews, and as a consequence there are fears of another mutiny.

The battleship Kniaz Potemkin, which was sunk by the mutineers, was refloated this morning, the greater part of the water having been pumped out of her hull. When the vessel was brought to an even keel it was found that the mutineers had tampered with the engines and boilers so that they could not be relied upon. Accordingly the battleship was taken in tow by the Dnepr.

The Russian government will begin regular proceedings for the extradition of the crew of the Kniaz Potemkin as ordinary criminals.

In the diplomatic exchanges on the subject the Russian foreign office pointed out that Roumania's promise to give the mutineers an asylum was made before Roumania had been appraised of the other crimes committed by the Russian sailors.

Besides, the foreign office reminded Roumania that the mutineers had murdered a number of their officers.

PRINCESS OF WALES GIVES BIRTH TO SON

LONDON, July 12.—The Princess of Wales gave birth to a son at 3 o'clock this morning at Sandringham Palace. Both mother and child are doing well.

Some disappointment is felt that the new arrival is a boy instead of a girl, as four of the five former children of the Prince of Wales are boys and the Prince was hoping for the birth of another daughter.

CZAR'S GOVERNMENT PLANS JEW-BAITING THAT WILL RIVAL KISHINEFF HORROR

Count Ignatieff to Delegation of Jews from Thirty-six Russian Towns:

"The Russian Government knows you organized the Odessa revolution, and it will deal with you according to your Old Testament doctrine, of an eye for an eye and a tooth for a tooth."

Following this declaration the Jews of southern Russia appeal to the entire civilized world, particularly to the press of America, to protect them from the danger which threatens.

IT'S NOT SO WARM TO-DAY, BUT THE HUMIDITY INSPIRES THE COMIC WEATHER ARTIST

3 DEAD IN COLLISION; YACHT SUNK

Mystery in Hudson River Accident; Stories of Survivors Puzzle Police.

WOMAN ONE OF VICTIMS

By Boston American Leased Wire.

DOBBS FERRY, N. Y., July 12.—Three persons, one of them a woman, are believed to have perished in the sinking of the steam yacht Normandi in the Hudson River, off this village, during the night.

The strange actions and conflicting stories told by the survivors who were rescued from the river after they had been swimming for more than twenty minutes greatly puzzle the police and other village authorities, who at daylight this morning began an investigation.

The three men rescued from the water quickly disappeared, boarding a train for New York, before a policeman could be found to detain them.

The yacht is owned by Charles W. Dunmont, president of the American Law Books Publishing Company of No. 96 Wilham street, New York. It is believed here that the woman drowned was a member of his family.

A young man, who gave his name as Rudd, and who may have been one of the three survivors, went to the Yonkers police early to-day and told them the name of the yacht. He said that others on the yacht were Captain Norton, Engineer Green and an oiler, the latter two of whom he was sure had perished.

The Yonkers police let Rudd go without finding out any more details.

The yacht was run down and sunk by some vessel, the identity of which has not yet been revealed. According to one story current here it was the Albany night boat bound up the river that crashed into the yacht. Another report is that the craft was a foreign tramp steamer.

The three survivors were picked up out of the water by the crew of a passing schooner and were set ashore by one of the schooner's small boats, rowed by two Swedes, who, apparently could not talk English. The schooner then proceeded on her way down the river.

MERCURY AND HUMIDITY NOW IN COLLUSION

Both on the Jump and Boston Is Threatened With Oppression.

WIND FROM THE SOUTH

With the humidity 10 degrees above normal and the weather sharps promising higher temperatures before nightfall, Boston is in line for another sticky, uncomfortable day.

The temperature has been steadily falling since five o'clock this morning, when it registered 73. At six o'clock it had fallen to 72, at seven o'clock the thermometer registered 70, at eight it was 70, at nine 71, and at 10 it had not changed. The Weather Bureau says it will jump. The humidity is 86.

The fog and haze has partly obscured the sun, and its rays have not been felt as severely as yesterday and Monday. Clear weather is promised for the afternoon and higher temperature, with no sign of decrease in the humidity. The wind is from the southeast and very light.

Reports from New England stations show that fair weather prevaleation, with showers promised to-night for every portion except western New Hampshire and Maine. Providence and Hartford have the highest temperature, 8 and Eastport, Me, the lowest, 58.

Heavy fogs are reported at Nantucket, with thunder showers during the night.

Thursday will be cloudy, probably with showers, the warmest section, too, set. The temperature will drop a few degrees. Fair weather is the rule all portions of the country to-day except along the eastern great lakes, where rainy is falling. New York's temperature is 78, and Philadelphia and Washington report 76.

PHIPPSES HELD ON CHARGE OF SHOOTING 3 MEN

American Steel Magnate and Son Under $25,00 Bail for Trial.

Special Cable to Boston American.

LONDON.—At Inverness Henry C. Phipps, the American Steel Magnate, and his son John S. Phipps, charged before the Sheriff, with the reckless discharge of firearms, whereby three men were injured, one seriously, have been committed for trial and held in bail of $2,500 each.

Mr. Phipps, when temporarily the guest of Lovel Lovat's Highland place, Beaufort Castle, was boating on the River Beauly at midnight on July 4, accompanied by his two sons, when he saw men in a boat whom he supposed to be poachers. He fired a shot after hailing them Mr. Phipps fired a gun for the purpose of frightening them. One of the men named Fraser was hit in the face and seriously wounded. He was taken to the nearest house, where he proved to be a servant of Lord Lovat. A physician was summoned from Edinburgh and he had to remove one of Fraser's eyes.

STORK, NOT CAR CREW, AT FAULT

NEW YORK, July 12.—A rule of the Brooklyn Rapid Transit Company requires that employees must write out a detailed report of any accident or incident occurende on the surface or elevated lines. The stork visited a passenger on Sunday, and this report reached the office of the company:

"Car 5,198. Grand street line, 12:40 p. m.; 7—9—'05. Mrs. Catherine Burke; Mot. Sattell. Car in motion on down trip at Broadway ferry. A woman was taken sick in car and removed to E. D. Hospital; condemned car. 1 passenger; 0 witnesses. Crew not at fault."

WILL PUNISH COTTON 'LEAKS'

WASHINGTON, D. C., July 12.—President Roosevelt has ordered a thorough investigation of the Bureau of Statistics of the Agricultural Department, at the head of the cotton "leaks," and has instructed Solicitor-General Henry E. Hoyt to "go to the bottom of the matter, find out and uncover all the culprits; then let the facts be shown and the culprits be prosecuted."

District Attorney Beach has been given charge of the work. He will have the assistance of the department of justice, including the corps of special agents, and Secretary Wilson has also promised to aid him in every way.

Since the finding of the cotton "leak," similar "leaks" in other crop reports of a speculative nature are suspected. Secretary Wilson, who for three years has laughed down stories of "leaks," is now not certain but what there are peculiar things in connection with information about the corn and the wheat crops.

Formal charges have even been made to the department that there has been jugglery with reference to some of the tobacco estimates for June.

BILLY LUSH HAD GOOD REASON

NEW HAVEN, Ct., July 12.—One reason why Billy Lush of the Cleveland, the Yale coach, has not before joined the Indians was known to-day when the birth of a son was announced at the cosey Lush home in West Haven. Both mother and child are doing well.

Lush's brother was married Sunday night, so that domestic affairs have claimed his attention for a week. It is probable that he will join the Clevelands within a week, unless the deal with the New York Americans goes through.

RUSSIANS FREE CREW UNDER BRITISH GUNS

ENGLISH WARSHIPS FORCE CZAR'S CRUISER TO LIBERATE CAPTIVE SAILORS.

MARSEILLES, July 11.—British warships enforced a demand made by the British Consul at Port Said on the Russian converted cruised Dneiper, for the freedom of the crew of the British steamer de Klida, which had been sunk by the Dneiper. Whether or not the British ships intended to fire on the Russian, as their action indicated, no one knows. But under their guns the Russian commander of the Dneiper gave in.

When the Dneiper arrived at Port Said with the crew the British complained to the consul that the Dneiper's captain was determined to take them to Russia.

The consul, accompanied by the commanders of the British cruisers Lancaster and Suffolk, boarded the Dneiper and requested that the British subjects on board be liberated. The captain of the Dneiper flatly refused the request, whereupon the consul informed him that if they were not released within an hour special measures would be taken. The consul and the officers accompanying him then left the Russian warship.

Immediately after the Lancaster raised her anchor and swung around, ready to approach the Dneiper. This hint was sufficient for the Russian captain, who instantly sent the St. Klida's crew ashore. They were brought here on a Peninsular & Oriental line steamer.

CHINA APPEALS TO FRANCE FOR PEACE TERMS BY POWERS

PARIS, July 12.—China has addressed a note to the French Government similar to the notes she has already addressed to the Japanese and Russian Governments. She adds that in case any demand for representation at the peace conference shall be rejected by Japan and Russia she hopes for the support of the Powers. China would rather have Japan as mediator than a formal act agreed to by Russia, Japan and China than to receive it from Japan's hands alone.

ST. PETERSBURG, July 11.—Officials of the foreign office this afternoon expressed doubts whether any of the neutral powers would support China's wish to participate in the peace conference. It is believed that the opinion among the powers is that the belligerents should treat alone at a settlement, and that China might then be allowed to raise her question.

TWENTY KILLED AND INJURED IN WARSAW STRIKE RIOTING

WARSAW, July 12.—Three bloody encounters between troops and striking workmen, in which about twenty persons were killed or wounded, have occurred here.

The strikers were marching through the city from house to house, demanding the lowering of rents by twenty per cent. Many proprietors, not fear, complied with the demands of the strikers.

DEFENCE FUND FOR JEWS IN RUSSIA

"We shall arm all the Jews in Russia. There will never be another Kishineff, then. The slaughter of men, women and children in Russia, hereafter, will be the work of their fathers, will never be repented. When the Gentiles find they receive shot for shot the Russian Jewish massacres will cease."

M. A. Sobolinsky, the Salem street banker, is treasurer for New England of the "Jewish Self Defence Fund." He spoke as above to the BOSTON AMERICAN to-day of the purpose of the fund, which is being collected by twenty young Jewish refugees, who escaped from the land of the Czar after their families had been killed in the outrages against the people of Israel.

"The first blow has been struck already," said Mr. Sobolinsky. "It was at Ilfonuly. A Jewish massacre was planned. The Jews were armed. They fired back at the Russians. They fired better than those who attacked them. Gentiles fell faster than Jews. The massacre ceased."

Headquarters in Switzerland.

Headquarters of the movement which is a world-wide one, are in Geneva, Switzerland. Arms and ammunition are purchased outside Russia. They enter the great, dark country by an underground railroad that the police of the dreaded Third Section would give much to discover.

"The Jews," said Mr. Sobolilh, "are working continously for liberation. They are constantly in our midst, but they are working. The yield is coming, and coming soon, when the populace of Russia will cease to regard the Jews as easy prey for any attack. Until now natives of our race have been unable to secure funds for our Jewish fund has changed that.

"At the present in Russia, all arms lock and seal all doors and windows every night after the workmen leave, in order that no arms may be taken. The retail storekeepers have no arms, which are unlawful, and a strict account of their sale is required by the government. No Jew is allowed to purchase firearms, hence they have to resort to other methods. The government takes every precaution to prevent the arming of the rest of the populace from obtaining arms, so that when the mob is turned loose on the Jews they can find no aid will without fear of being killed. The affair at Ilfonuly taught them a lesson. When the Jews, armed and prepared for the rioters, kill a few more, it will be better for the safety of the Jews in Russia.

"The Jews who are planning this affair belong right in Russia and are sending out circulars telling of the tales of horrible cruelty they have suffered and are suffering as a result of the government's attitude against the Jews. I have two circulars which were published in Russia, and to show the peril of printing them, any Jew found with one in his possession would be banished or shot. The circulars are not revolutionary. They simply tell the truth about conditions existing. But for this the government would prevent the publication.

House to House Canvass.

"At present our methods of collecting has been a house to house canvass, and it has been most successful. The young men wear a badge on which is printed in Hebrew the words, Jewish Self-Defence Fund. Two collectors travel together and have a card containing figures of the fifty cents. The collector punches the card received in the presence of the donator, and the money is turned over to the treasurer. The idea has proved very successful. All the unions, societies, etc., will next be visited.

"This fund is entirely separate from the revolutionary fund, which is in charge of another committee, with New York as headquarters. You know that at least seventy-five per cent of the Jews in Russia and the rest of the world subscribe to the revolutionary fund, and believe in the revolution when the time is ripe, but the present spirit of spies constantly arouses the work of the committee."

Discover Spy in Boston.

A Russian spy, discovered in Boston, has been forced to leave suddenly by Boston revolutionists. He claimed to be Ivan Nesvsky of Moscow and attracted attention by his liberality in offering money to be used in buying arms and ammunition for the cause of Russian liberty. But he was too inquisitive and too liberal, and the police decided to investigate himself with suspected him. When he was exposed he went to New York.

Nesvsky is described as about forty years old, dark, about five feet seven inches tall and weighs about 165 pounds. He offered Nathan Bernovitch $500 with which to buy arms for the Russian revolutionists but demanded the receipt of the revolutionists in Russia, who finally got the arms or money.

BRIDAL CHAMBER FOR U. S. OFFICIALS AT PEACE CONFERENCE

PORTSMOUTH, N. H., July 12.—The bridal chamber and adjoining rooms in that part of the Rockingham Hotel, the best portion of the house, have been reserved for the representatives of the United States Government, who are to accompany the Russian-Japanese Peace Commissioners to this city, and, because of the elaborate arrangements that are being perfected, many of the guests to know believe that President Roosevelt will be a visitor for at least a day while the conference is in progress.

Arrangements for the sessions of the conference at the Navy Yard will be perfected within the next two weeks, and after that the arrival of the members of the commission will be expected at any time. That the sessions will be of a protracted nature is the common opinion, as the envoys will not devote more than two hours a day in deliberations.

MISS TARBELL ANSWERED BY ROCKEFELLER

His Counsel Denies Truth of Magazine Account of Deal with Corrigan.

DID NOT SQUEEZE FRIEND

By Boston American Leased Wire.

NEW YORK, July 12.—John D. Rockefeller has issued, through Virgil P. Kline, his Cleveland attorney, his own version in detail of the Rockefeller-Corrigan lawsuit, in reply to Miss Ida M. Tarbell's magazine article in which she charged that the Standard Oil multimaster had, by oppressive and unfair means, impoverished his boyhood friend.

Corrigan was an inventor who, twenty-eight years ago, sold out his oil interests to the Standard, receiving 2,500 shares of the stock.

Miss Tarbell's version of the subsequent proceedings was that Mr. Rockefeller took advantage of his friend's financial distress, at a time when he could not secure aid, to deprive him of his stock, which then was worth $700,000.

Mr. Kline represented Mr. Rockefeller in the Corrigan litigation. He says that in February, 1895, Corrigan was indebted to Mr. Rockefeller in the sum of $415,000, $25,000 of which was interest, past due. Mr. Rockefeller also advanced to Corrigan, Mr. Kline says, $200,000, secured by deposits of stock in an iron mining company in which Corrigan was interested.

The arbitrators, Mr. Kline says, determined that the charges of fraud were not proven, that Mr. Rockefeller made the purchase in good faith, and that he did not take the circumstances or necessities of Corrigan as a means of extorting the stock from him.

Mr. Kline says that Mr. Rockefeller did not purchase the certificate for holding, but at once put them upon the market, and within ninety days had sold them at very slight advances over the purchase price.

He adds that Miss Tarbell must have based her charges on the allegations of the plaintiff, instead of the testimony adduced at the hearings.

NOVELTY FOR POLO TOURNEY

The novelty at the polo tourney, which starts at Narragansett Pier, July 20, will be the "freshmen cups" event, with no player to have a handicap exceeding two goals. This will give the novices an opportunity to obtain the cry heat experience by playing against men of their own class.

The other events are the open handicap for the Narragansett cups, the Rhode Island cups for low goal teams, with no player to have a handicap exceeding five goals, and the Point Judith cup, which is open to all.

ERNE TO MEET HARRY LEWIS

PHILADELPHIA, July 12.—Young Erne and Harry Lewis, both of this city, are to meet in a 15 round affair to-night, at the Lafayette A. C., July 18, at 130 pounds, weight to call it 3 lb. on the day of contest. The bout will be to a decision.

Erne is the lad who created a furore a battle on Monday night against Aby was foul and furious. The Philadelphia reports say that Erne had the best of it. Lewis, the Cleveland battler against the Kid, too. They ought to make a great bout for fifteen rounds.

PROSECUTIONS NOW IN THE EQUITABLE

ficient to form a basis of criminal prosecution.

"There have been efforts made recently to obtain the minutes of the grand jury in criminal prosecutions, and the courts usually have denied this privilege to the defendant. There are often grand jury inquiries in which it would be disadvantageous to the prosecutor to have the proceedings become public.

"The proceedings before Superintendent Hendricks were secret. If there were any reasons of public policy why those proceedings should be disclosed in my humble opinion the question of disclosing them should be left to the man charged with the duty of determining that there were grounds for criminal proceedings against anybody interested."

Failed to Get Evidence.

The District Attorney complained that he had made several efforts to get the Equitable records.

"None of the present directors or trustees of the Equitable would comment upon the remarkable disclosures in the testimony taken by Superintendent Hendricks. Paul Morton, at present in control of the Equitable, after an hour's conference with Thomas F. Ryan, announced that hereafter no person connected with the Equitable would be permitted to talk about the affairs of the society except himself. This attempt to suppress all information concerning the society will not likely prove effective.

"It is not unlikely that the most amazing and interesting revelations made concerning the Equitable will be in the criminal courts of the State, where the gag law cannot be made to apply.

"The result is likely to be a sweeping demand for the investigation of all life insurance companies in this State, and a close scrutiny into their Wall street connections and their financial methods."

DEPEW IMPROVEMENT COMPANY GONE INTO HANDS OF RECEIVER

Special to the Boston American.

BUFFALO, N. Y., July 11.—The Depew Improvement Company, which obtained $250,000 from the Equitable Life Assurance Society upon a mortgage that has resulted in an apparent loss to the society of over $200,000, is now in the hands of a receiver. A train of victims stretching behind it tell the story of a gigantic real estate operation, conducted on the principles of Tammany finance.

Chauncey M. Depew heads the list of those who signed as stockholders the certificate of consent to the mortgage filed in the county clerk's office of Erie County, on January 17, 1897. Mr. Depew's name appears at the head of the signatures to the annual reports of the Improvement Company, and most of the most prominent residents of Buffalo were caught.

The Depew Improvement Company was organized in 1895 with a capital of $1,500,000. It bought a large tract of land, since called Depew City, about twelve miles east of Buffalo. The prime movers in the deal were the late Walter S. Webb and Charles Gould of New York and John A. Spore of Buffalo. They sold the controlling stock, and the remainder of it was sold to leading business men of Buffalo.

The company succeeded in obtaining a loan of $250,000 from the Equitable Life. It gave in return for this sum a mortgage on property valued by the state insurance department at $150,000.

CHARGE OF LAWSON AGAINST N. Y. LIFE DENIED BY M'CALL

By Boston American Leased Wire.

NEW YORK, July 12.—President John A. McCall of the New York Life Insurance Company has issued an answer to Thomas W. Lawson's charge that personal profits are made by the trustees out of the New York Security and Trust Company. The document takes the form of a letter to the inquiring commissioners of Kentucky and Tennessee answering questions propounded by them.

Mr. McCall says:

"This trust company was organized by the New York Life Insurance Co. in the year 1889 and the New York Life purchased over 5,000 shares (a controlling interest) of the trust company's stock at $150 per share. The New York Life retained the controlling interest until November, 1901. The company sold 5,005 shares to a group of men for $800 per share in cash, with a further agreement that it should receive one-half of any increase in the value of said stock between the date of sale and January 1, 1907, provided the stock is sold for more than $800 per share on or before January 1, 1907. Only a few of the shares sold by the New York Life have changed hands since the New York Life sold them, but in each case stock has been sold for less than the purchaser paid for it. Had it been sold at a profit, the New York Life would have received one-half of such profit.

YALE MEN DEMAND THAT DEPEW RESIGN FROM CORPORATION

Special to the Boston American.

NEW HAVEN, July 12.—A strong demand is made by Yale men that Chauncey M. Depew resign from the Yale corporation, the university governing body, because of the scandal involved in his connection with the Equitable Life Society.

The demand was voiced in the New Haven Register last night editorially as follows:

"Every Yale man feels the discredit of Depew's behavior, for repeatedly have they elected him to the corporation and cheered him when misunderstanding him. His along mater gave him the degree of doctor of laws. When his term expires next year, unless he voluntarily retires, it will be necessary to relieve him from the board of control. He should begin now to plan for an escape from that humiliation."

It was said this editorial meets with widespread approval from Yale men.

ARCANUMITES REVOLT IN N. J.

Opposition to the new rates of the Royal Arcanum has spread to New Jersey and seven local councils in Newark have united with Kempton Council of Nutley, in calling a mass meeting of protesting councils to be held in Orange, Thursday, Friday, Saturday, July 13, at Nutley.

It is proposed, at this meeting, to formulate a course of action which will include a declaration that the new rates are excessive and that the prosperity and even life of the order is threatened by discrimination against the older members. The Supreme Council will be asked to reconvene and revoke the new rates.

LAWSON DEFIES STANDARD OIL SYSTEM SPIES

Voice Much Improved, He Addresses Over 3,000 People At Fairbury, Neb.

HIGHEST BIDDER CAN BUY

FAIRBURY, Neb., July 12.—"There are three able spies of the Standard Oil System listening to me now," cried Thomas W. Lawson in his address to 3,000 people at the Fairbury Chautauqua. "But I defy them," he went on dramatically. "Let them face me here to-day—not wait till they can send the report to Wall street to-morrow."

The audience held its breath, apparently expecting the challenge to be accepted. Mr. Lawson was allowed to proceed, however, without interruption.

Mr. Lawson shook hands with more than 500 men and women, some of whom said they had come 500, 600 and 700 miles to see him. Congressman Hensbaw presided and made the introductions. At 2 o'clock in the afternoon a number of citizens came down with their automobiles and a brass band. Mr. Lawson and his party were taken aboard and the procession moved around City Hall square in solemn state. There was not a soul on the streets; everybody had gone down to the circus tent in which the Chautauqua meetings are held.

The audience was about half made up of women. The paid admissions to the grounds were 3,600. It was scorching hot. Mr. Lawson had partly recovered his voice and spoke in a low, conversational tone. He was introduced by Congressman Henshaw, who said that he did not think it necessary to make any fuss over Mr. Lawson's motives; for his part, the Congressman said, he did not care what Mr. Lawson's motives were, whether they were founded on sincere philanthropy or a desire for personal gain, though he did not believe the latter. The point was that Mr. Lawson was telling the 80,000,000 of American people something they needed to know, and that in all the great West truth could not come too fast or in too great volume.

Mr. Lawson said, before getting down to the substance of the arguments and statements with which the readers of his previous speeches are familiar: "I must ask your kind indulgence. After my second day in the West the system stole my voice. And it makes it absolutely necessary for you to be pretty kind to me or you will surely get a deaf and dumb talk that you will not like.

"After I got through talking in Kansas City one of the papers said, 'Why, there is nothing new there. That is the old Kansas, Missouri and Nebraska Populism. I don't know whether it is or not, for I have been so very busy in my lifetime doing those things that I know about, that I have not had much time to spend hunting up other people's business which I did not see had any connection with mine. Now it may be that what I have been saying and am going to say is the old Populism of the West. If it is, it must be pretty good stuff—this old Populism of the West. (Applause and laughter.) I have no means of knowing but this.

"At the urgent solicitation of your Governor and the Governors of five other states I have come. A most extraordinary request from six Governors to ask a plain citizen to come West and tell them about this old story—this worn-out, disused and thrown-overboard Populism. But that is not strange. I might by some hocus-pocus arrangement have compelled the six Governors of your six great states to invite me out here. But I find, the western people are greatly interested."

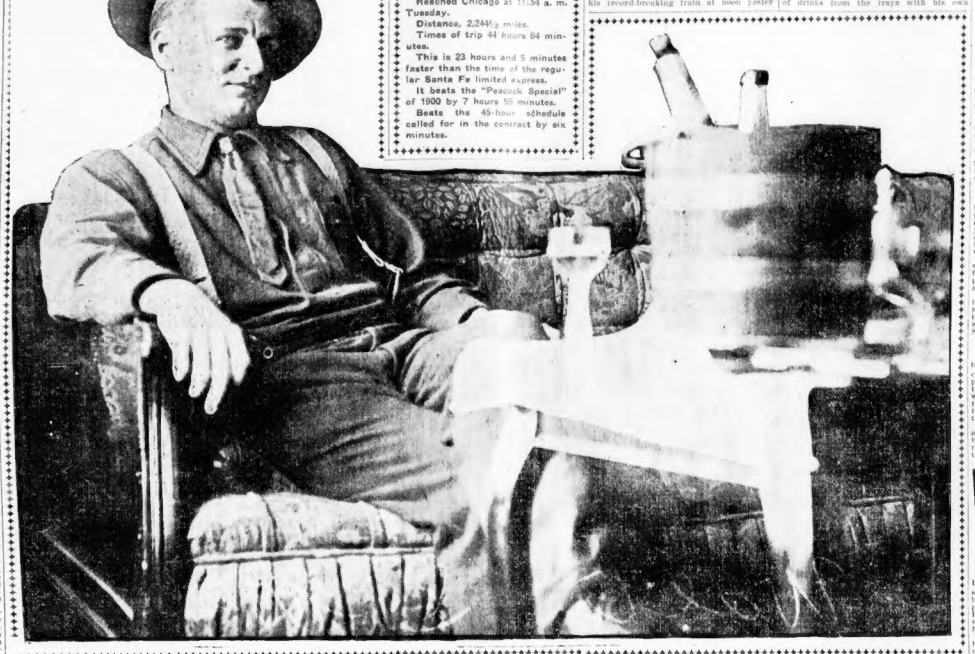
3,000 CHEER COWBOY CROESUS IN CHICAGO



Scott's Record Trip From Los Angeles to Chicago

Left Los Angeles at 1 p. m. Sunday.

Reached Chicago at 11:54 a. m. Tuesday.

Distance, 2,244½ miles.

Times of trip 44 hours 54 minutes.

This is 23 hours and 5 minutes faster than the time of the regular Santa Fe limited express.

It beats the "Peacock Special" of 1900 by 7 hours 55 minutes.

Beats the 49-hour schedule called for in the contract by six minutes.

Beats All Train Records and Now Wants to Get to New York in Thirteen Hours.

By Boston American Leased Wire.

CHICAGO, July 12.—Walter Scott, the miner millionaire, arrived in Chicago on his record-breaking train at noon yesterday. There was almost a riot in the Polk street railroad station, so dense was the crowd assembled to greet him.

The blanket-Indian Crown and his yellow dog had to escape to the Great Northern hotel in a hoodlum express wagon.

He had broken all records for train travel. He came from Los Angeles, 2,250 miles, in just forty-four hours and fifty-four minutes.

Kept on Breaking Records.

Scott kept on breaking records all day. He broke his own record by going to bed at 11 o'clock. All the railroad records were broken by him during the afternoon in successive runs to friends in the bridal suite of the Great Northern hotel. At nightfall he consulted his watch to save himself from collapsing. He had outdrunk a score of admiring friends.

Scott's stay in Chicago is indefinite. He may be here another hour or a year. He doesn't know himself what he will do.

"His one desire to-day was to go from Chicago to New York in thirteen hours. None of the score of railroad managers who solicited his business to-day would promise any such frightful speed. This is why Scott remained in Chicago instead of over night.

"Thirteen hours to New York or nothing," he said. "I'm buying speed, and its everything in the world I want."

Besieged by Cranks.

Cranks and parasites by the score hovered around the young spender from the time he arrived until he went to bed. The door of his magnificent suite was open to all, with no questions asked. Champagne and whiskey were free as water, and the smiling host welcomed all to the drink laden tables and silken easy chairs.

He was persecuted by schemers of all grades. They asked charity, they wanted to sell him stock, they wanted him to back their enterprises; claimed kindred, through being Westerners or old sports.

Scott gave no sign of noticing their approach. He trumpled their prospectuses, papers or cards in his hand and answered all in the same words:

"I'm buying nothing but speed. I've got nothing to sell. I've got a suite and am paying my way, so I'll do as I please."

Scott had been without sleep, fussed on a flying train for two days and nights, but he drank with all comers. He drank champagne with his wife and a select party of intimate friends in his royal bedroom, and came forth often enough never to miss a round of whisky with the motley crowd that crowded the parlor of his suite. A and lots of it—quick!" dozen bell boys rushed liquor to the place without ceasing for eight hours.

Scott insisted upon serving every round of drinks from the trays with his own hands, shouting a toast and the warning:

"Any man caught coasting his drink I will throw out of my window!"

Met by Mob of 5,000.

A howling mob of 5,000 persons surged around the Polk street railroad station when the dust-covered train—consisting of a baggage car, a diner and the sleeping car Muskegon—pulled in at 11:54 o'clock. The mob in the depot set up a yell for "Scotty." The people on the train, and at the reception, cheered Scott to the roof. The cowboy Croesus grabbed the nearest dog he had picked up in Los Angeles or Arizona, and shouted with a $1,000 hearty cheer, and, tugging for the platform—

Looked the Typical Cowboy.

He looked the typical denizen of the Western desert. His sailing hours gave way, crowded by a cheap soft black felt hat and a cowboy coat on Sundays. He had on a long black ulster, which he quickly stripped off, revealing a rough blue flannel shirt, corduroy trousers and cowboy leggings. His wardrobe knows no such thing as vest or coat. His string tie was a glaring red.

With photographic flashlights popping every second, Scott and his dog were pushed lifted and shifted, until four policemen formed a flying wedge, raised them on to a trunk truck and shoved them to the express office.

A team of glass wagon to take me to my hotel," said Scott, meaning an automobile, but when he saw Taylor was jammed with screeching humanity and no cab in sight, he was disgusted.

He had apparently forgotten his wife, whom he had married in Los Angeles. A policeman shoved the jubilant Midas into a one-horse express wagon, and, slamming the tailboard down, started the horse off at a gallop.

Scott's dog, Miner Scott looked like a ragged wild man to the crowds as he whirled away.

At Van Buren and Dearborn streets the record breaker abandoned and dealt again appealed for a "glass wagon." Though the hotel was but a block away, he jumped out of the wagon and took a carriage.

Scott gave away $50 in silver bills to the driver and other persons who helped him the far. He offered a dollar to a newspaper, and was dumbfounded when it was declined.

The first thing Scott did when he entered the 23rd on day period under the Great Northern was to pitch his grass hat into the ocean.

Then he called for the proprietor in these words:

"Who's the boss of this dump? I want to see him right away. We want booze and lots of it—quick. And be quick about it."

"WHO'S THE OWNER OF THIS DUMP? WE WANT BOOZE AND LOTS OF IT—QUICK!"

—Walter Scott, the "Cowboy Croesus," on arrival at Chicago hotel.

FIND BODIES OF 68 VICTIMS OF FIREDAMP

126 Believed to Have Been Caught in Welsh Mine Death-Trap.

DISASTER WORST IN YEARS

CARDIFF, Wales, July 12.—Sixty-eight bodies have been recovered from No. 2 pit of the National Colliery Company at Wattstown, in the Rhondda Valley, the centre of the great Welsh coal fields, to which there was an explosion of firedamp, and the rescuers are still hard at work. It is believed that 126 men were caught in the death trap and killed. The explosion was the worst in many years in a Welsh coal mine.

A loud report was immediately followed by the belching of clouds of smoke and dust from the pit shaft, in which 150 men were working.

Doomed Men Cut Off.

The force of the explosion wrecked the machinery at the mouth of the pit, cutting off communication with the doomed men in this direction. No. 1 shaft, adjoining, has ordinarily afforded communication with No. 2. The 800 men in No. 1 and the 168 who escaped from No. 2 were drawn up.

A rescue party descended, but its work was seriously impeded by the foul air and falling masses of earth caused by the explosion. Nine bodies had been recovered at midnight.

Heroic efforts have been made for hours to reach the entombed men, but late to-night the absence of all sound from the interior of the mine told the tale of the worst disaster that has taken place in South Wales since 1894.

Pitiful Scenes at Mine.

The news of the explosion spread rapidly and thousands of men, women and children thronged about the head of the pit, seeking information concerning relatives and friends. The mountain roadways were crowded all the afternoon, and at night there were a stream of people in the neighborhood of the mine, all contributing to the pitiful scenes.

Efforts at rescue were still in progress at midnight and currents of fresh air were being driven down the shaft, but the rescuers worked without hope of reducing the list of fatalities.

YOUNG JEWESS WEDS GENTILE

Ignores Traditions and Takes Choice of Her Heart, Despite Parental Objections.

Disregarding the prejudice and traditional feeling of her race against those of the Christian faith, pretty Bertha Greenburg, the eighteen-year-old daughter of Mrs. Alexander Greenburg of Revere Beach, an Orthodox Jewess, has married the choice of her heart, William McLeod, a sturdy young Christian, who has wooed his sweetheart for two years, despite parental objections.

The couple were married Monday in Beachmont by the Rev. John Wesley Baker. When Mrs. Greenburg heard of the wedding she collapsed, and for a time was smitched forever. She begged that the "disgrace" of her daughter's having a Christian be kept out of the papers.

Bertha is a member of the second class at Boston University, is a cultured young woman, is in the line of art of painting and music and in business, having successfully managed the Ferris wheel at the beach.

The couple became acquainted two years ago, McLeod is nineteen years old, and has been employed at the Boston Navy Yard in Revere and at Point of Pines. This year he is working for the Merrill Co., and is dead set as a hard working, good sort of a chap. His home is in Saratoga, N. Y.

The young couple are now on a wedding tour, consisting of the time and money they have caused in the Revere Beach Jewish colony.

Miss Greenburg's mother is very wealthy and owns considerable real estate in Revere, and Union Park Hall in Boston. Beside she has three sons-in-law, and the mother was planning to get a fine Jewish husband for her when McLeod took her.

WILSON TO ASK FOR A DIVORCE

Woman Who Eloped With Young Walter Langdon Anticipates Husband's Action.

WINSTED, Ct., July 12.—Mrs. Janet L. Wilson, with whom young Walter Langdon eloped from his father's insane asylum at Hudson, N. Y., expects her husband to begin divorce proceedings.

"It is quite likely," she said to an AMERICAN reporter, "that Dr. Wilson will soon institute divorce proceedings, though I have given him no cause whatsoever. The relations between Walter Langdon and myself have been purely platonic.

"I have received a letter from my husband dated Westbrook, Ct., and it was more cruel than kind. He said he presumed I didn't need his company, as I already had an able companion in Walter. He did not express any intention of joining me, in fact, he said he was about to go on a yachting trip.

"The strange pair are still guests at Highland Lake Hotel. Asked if he still intended to keep the pledge he made to his father to leave the woman, young Langdon replied in the affirmative.

"I couldn't do it to-day," he said, "because the friend who is to take care of Mrs. Wilson did not arrive. I expect him positively to-morrow, however, and as soon as he comes I'll start for Vermont."

"Will you take along your infatuation for Mrs. Wilson?" was asked of the youth.

"I most certainly shall," was the reply. "Nothing can make me give it up. Mrs. Wilson is the most fascinating woman I ever met, and merely the fact that I am going away is not sufficient to dampen my admiration for her in the slightest degree."

$250,000 PENN RELICS FOUND

Heirlooms Found in London Include Letters Patent from William and Mary.

LONDON, July 12.—The letters patent granted to William Penn by William and Mary have been discovered in England and are now open for sale to the highest bidder. It was found in the possession of an English family, unconscious of its historical value, and its genuineness is vouched for by authorities.

The parchment measures 29½ by 23½ inches and is elaborately executed. On the left margin appear three lions, crowned, with three fleurs-de-lis. On the right are the lion rampant, the harp and the Tudor rose, each symbol being likewise crowned. The whole is surmounted by a representation of the royal arms and a portrait of King William III.

It has come on the market along with a number of other well authenticated Penn heirlooms, which include an oil painting of Admiral Penn, William Penn's father, a silver dinner plate, a silver tobacco box, a miniature in a gold frame of the head of a miniature in a gold frame of the head of Penn of the eighteenth century; two pieces of bloodstone, with the Penn arms; a gold and enamel watch; seals, two of gold, one of steel, one of brass, and one of stone; again; a link of a steel chain, a brass button, three small prints, a miniature of the head of a lady, letters with regard to the history of the plate, and a letter signed by Penn to Samuel Popys.

The minimum value placed on the collection is £50,000.

SUES TO STOP BIG REBATES

Former Officer of Harvester Trust Says Railroads Paid It Over $1,000,000.

CHICAGO, July 12.—Rodney B. Swift, formerly head of the experimental department of the McCormick branch of the International Harvester Company, has filed a bill against the company demanding an accounting, with the intention of stopping payment of big rebates to the trust.

Swift's connection with the company was severed some months ago, and suit was begun against him by officials of the company, who alleged that he had defrauded them in the sale of a patent.

In his bill Swift, as a stockholder, demands an accounting from the company, and demands that the court force the company to cease taking rebates from railroad companies, and also compel the company to return to the railroads money said by Swift to have been illegally exacted from the railroads in the past.

Since September 30, 1902, it is declared, railway companies have been making rebates to the International Harvester Company under the guise of an alleged division of freight rates with the Illinois Northern Company.

Swift asserts that the alleged illegal rebates made to the International Company since 1902 amount to more than $1,000,000.

STOP SEARCH FOR W. C. BURNS

The detectives who have been searching for Wylie C. Burns, the missing Boston and Malden stockbroker, who disappeared two weeks ago, have been called off the case, and there is every indication that the family has ceased from the search themselves.

Mr. Burns's family will give no information about the case. Mrs. Wilde is very ill and confined to her bed at the Malden home.

What can be the motive for Burns's absence is greatly puzzling his friends. He was known to be a devoted husband, and the idea of any domestic trouble is ridiculous. His business partner, T. C. Nash of No. 373 Washington street, Boston, says his account with the firm is now all in proper order, and Allen H. Wilde and Mrs. William A. Wilde, who were connected with him in the estate of the late William A. Wilde at Malden, insist that everything connected with the estate is precisely as it should be, and that they know of no reason for his absence.

SECOND ROUNDS TO-DAY.

The first rounds of match play for the Taylor championship, and consolation prizes in the annual tournament of the Essex Golf Club of New England have been concluded in the course of the Wollaston Golf Club at Montclair. The second rounds will be decided to-day, and the semi-finals to-morrow.

DEATH LEAP TO ESCAPE POLICE

By Boston American Leased Wire.

NEW YORK, July 12.—Samuel Levine, the fireling arrested after attempting to set fire to a Williamsburg tenement, leaped five stories from the photograph gallery of Police Headquarters in Brooklyn to-day, receiving fatal injuries.

Levine was about to be photographed for the Rogues' Gallery. While waiting for the camera to be adjusted he captors released him for an instant and he made a dash for the open window.

Before they could reach him he had made the awful plunge to the yard.

DISCHARGED FOR NOT FLAGGING

Freight Conductor George Powers of the Boston & Maine railroad has been dismissed. He was in charge of one of the trains in the wreck at Chelmsford Oct. recently in which three men were killed and several thousand dollars worth of rolling stock destroyed.

"It did not seem out a flagman, as the rule positively orders. He thought he had a chance to get across the cross over before the other freight was due. It would take but a minute or two to set his train across and he did not think it necessary to send out a flagman.

TEN WHITE PERCH A DAY THE LIMIT

AUGUSTA, Me., July 12.—A decision by the Fish and Game Commission makes it unlawful for any person to catch or kill more than ten white perch in one day, or the occupants of any boat, canoe, raft or other vessel to catch or kill a total of more than twenty-five white perch in one day in Lake Cobbosseecontee, Kennebec County.

TROOPS BEGIN TO BREAK CAMP AT WESTFIELD

Sham Battle in Moonlight Ends Successful Eight Days' Tour of Duty.

GEN. MILES TALKS ON WORK

Special to the Boston American.

CAMP BARTLETT, Westfield, July 12.—Almost as soon as dawn broke over Hampton Plains, with its 6,000 encamped soldiers, preparations were begun for breaking up camp. Tired and dusty after their strenuous eight days' service, the men are anxious to once more get back to their homes and resume routine life.

The last manoeuvre of the camp was the big sham battle, in which General Miles personally led the First and Second Brigades against the artillery range, captured it and brought the enemy back to camp. The attack took place at about 9 o'clock, after a downpour of rain. The infantry began the battle, attacking the range from the left flank.

Artillery boomed and Krags cracked. The noise made the scene very light, and viewed from the surrounding hills the flashes of the guns looked like so many big fire flies, while the noise could be heard for miles.

Gen. Miles regards the tour of duty just ended as one of immense benefit to the militia of the State. He says the cost has not been excessive and the experience gained by the men will prove of the greatest value to them.

Camp a Success, Says Miles.

"There is not the slightest doubt in my mind but that now within one hour the 6,000 men in the Massachusetts militia could get in readiness to go into division quarters and prepare for a campaign anywhere in the United States," said the general.

"This has been the first division camp Massachusetts has had since 1876, and I believe it has been a grand, good thing for the militia. The troops have had the actual experience of going into a war time preparatory camp. They could give a good account of themselves now if they were compelled to go into active camp. Men of all ranks have felt what it means to move in so large a body of men.

"While the discipline has been lax at times, the men have done nothing that calls for serious criticism. Their conduct has been well-intentioned. The general of defense of the officers and men has been good."

Speaking of personal affairs, the general referred rather sarcastically to the action of Washington authorities in reducing his salary. He feels it a rather peculiar condition of affairs when the powers that be place a premium upon the retired officer who sits down in an arm chair and takes life easy after retirement while the man who tries to give the country the benefit of his experience is snubbed.

Miles Sails for Europe Tomorrow.

"In spite of this talk about the enormous aggregate of the salaries I was to get for my services to the State," said the general, "I think it might be well just to say that the State has not paid a single bill for my travel or other personal expenses. There is something good in being loyal to one's State no matter what may be said or done, and the motive of loyalty is the best.

Gen. Miles regards the tour of duty just will be brief, as he will sail from New York from where he will sail for Europe. He will go at his own expense and will not draw a salary from the State while away from duty.

The last few days of camp have been so hot that the medical department has had its hands full caring for the men. There are now about 20 men in the hospitals, and five have been sent to Boston, one to the Massachusetts General and the other to the City hospital. The department advised that the parade be put off yesterday, but the men had assembled and rather than send them back to their quarters the General ordered a short drill.

The first detachment of the division to leave camp to-day will probably get away at about 10:30. Only troops, horses, baggage and batteries are to be entrained to-day. The camp equipage will be shipped to-morrow. There will be twelve trains in all for the accommodation of the troops. A consolidated mess has been established near headquarters. Twelve men and two non-commissioned officers of the First Cavalry are remaining as police while the men are entrained, and will remain until all the equipage has been shipped.

ARTILLERY GETS FILL OF WORK AT FORT RODMAN

NEW BEDFORD, July 12.—The artillery men of the First Heavies, in camp at Fort Rodman, are buckling down to work and seem to have caught the spirit of the camp. They are anxiously awaiting the big gun practice, which comes this week. To-day the sixty-foot launch recently added to the post will tow the targets out in the bay and moored them.

The officers attended school in the morning, and the non-commissioned officers were given an hour and a half instruction in the use of angle measuring instruments. Infantry drill was given the detachment during the afternoon, Lieutenant Hathaway and Captain Frothingham.

A firing platform for one-pounders has been set up on Battery Barton, and later in the week the two-pounder sub-calibre guns will be used in connection with the gunners' school in the use of the telescopic sight.

Colonel James A. Frye has again announced that this will be the last tour of duty in which he will participate. He says he will retire at the end of the year, ending fifteen years' service with the Massachusetts militia.

One of the features of life at the camp during the night was a theoretical attack upon the fort by a torpedo boat. The regulars called to the defense, and in a few minutes had picked the boat out with the searchlights and they theoretically sunk it with the big guns.

ELKS ELECT THEIR RULERS

BUFFALO, July 12.—At the annual reunion of the Elks Robert W. Brown, of Louisville, was elected grand exalted ruler. The other officers chosen:

C. F. Tomlinson of Winston, N. C., G. E. L. R.; Charles W. Kaufmann of Hoboken, N. J., G. E. R.; Edward McLaughlin of Boston, G. E. L. K.; Fred C. Robinson of Dubuque, Ia., grand secretary; Fred T. Toner of Charleston, S. C., grand treasurer; W. W. McClellan of Pittsburg, Pa., grand tyler; John H. Cochrane of Boston, grand trustee for long term; Dr. W. H. Haviland of Butte, Mont., grand trustee.

The only contest was for the office of short trustee, and Dr. Haviland defeated C. L. Kingsley of Waterloo, Ia., and Mayor Charles C. Schmidt of Wheeling, W. Va. The report of Grand Secretary Robinson of Dubuque, Ia., showed that fifty-three lodges have been added during the year, and the total membership is now 200,040. The total assets of the order are $189,278 and the liabilities $4,658. During the year $10,000 has been added to the reserve fund.

PRINCE AND PRINCESS GUSTAVUS ADOLPHUS OF SWEDEN, AND THE BRIDESMAIDS.

In Group Is Princess Patricia, Who Has Declared Her Intentions to Wed for Love.

Prince Gustavus Adolphus of Sweden and his beautiful bride, Princess Margaret of Connaught, were photographed with their wedding party.

The beautiful bride is shown seated in front of her husband, in her wedding gown of priceless lace and silks. Her sister, the charming Princess Patricia of Connaught, who has declared that she will not marry even a king unless she loves him, is seen standing at the right of the picture.

Prince Gustavus and his British bride received a great ovation on their return to Sweden a few days ago.

PEARY MAY GO TO-MORROW

NEW YORK, July 12.—Commander Peary has been a very busy man getting his ship ready for sailing. The bulk of the supplies have been put aboard and the Roosevelt hauls out into the North River to-day. Peary hopes to get away for Sidney, C. B., to-morrow.

The Rockefeller story has been knocked in the head by the explorer. John D. Rockefeller has not contributed a cent to the expedition," said Peary. "I have paid for every drop of oil. The gentleman who so kindly contributed the $10,000 was General Thomas H. Hubbard."

General Thomas H. Hubbard visited the Roosevelt to-day.

DOW REVOKED HIS DECREE

BELLEFONTAIN, O., July 13.—Because he is opposed to the hasty marriage of people divorced in his court, Judge Duncan Dow, when he learned that Lewis Spain, whom he divorced last week, and Miss Cora Stanley, who got her divorce last month, were about to marry, revoked Spain's divorce. The Judge also sent a messenger to notify the marriage license clerk, but Spain has secured the license and departed in ignorance of the fact that to use the marriage license will make him a bigamist.

BABY KILLED AS HE TODDLES AFTER FATHER

Two-Year-Old Walter Wickes Struck by Car and Mangled Before Parent's Eyes.

Tottering across the street on his shaky little legs to see his father play baseball, little Walter J. Wickes, the two-year-old son of Vernon H. Wickes of No. 54 Pauline street, Somerville, was struck by a rapidly moving inward bound Lowell car on Broadway, Somerville, and killed before his father's eyes.

Wickes, who is manager of a sales stable in East Cambridge, had left his home at about 7 o'clock to play ball with a scrub team in a lot near the Somerville Golf club's grounds. The little baby, hardly able to walk, was following him, the father turning every once in a while to encourage the laughing little mite of humanity in his efforts to keep up with him.

The father did not notice the swiftly moving trolley car bearing down upon the baby until it was too late. The motorman, John J. O'Connell of No. 1593 Massachusetts avenue, Arlington, did everything in his power to stop the big car, but it struck the little child as he was in the middle of the car tracks, and dragged his body 200 feet.

Willing hands helped pick up the big car while the frantic father crawled under it and got his baby's mangled body. He had been killed instantly.

Motorman O'Connell was overcome by the accident and had to be taken to his home, where he has suffered convulsions. Passengers say he begged of the by-standers to do everything possible to stop the car, but it was too near the child. The accident horrified a hundred or more passengers and spectators of the accident.

The baby was the youngest of a family of six. Mrs. Wickes is a critical condition at her home, and the shock of the news required the constant attendance of a physician. Mr. Wickes was prostrated by the accident.

TAKES FLYER AT CARNEGIE IDEA

NORTHFIELD, Vt., July 12.—Work has been begun on a new library building, for which George W. Brown, of Boston, has given $20,000. Mr. Brown is a native of Northfield. His father and grandfather lived here and the library will be a memorial to them. He left here when a young man, and has made a fortune in the shoe and leather business.

R. I. FIGHT ON POOL SELLING

PROVIDENCE, R. I., July 12.—A petition has been sent to Governor Utter by Edward M. Sullivan, a prominent citizen of Cranston, for the enforcement of the law against pool selling and book making at the race track. The petition declares that a pool-selling gambling scheme is to be run in connection with the race meeting on July 17. Mr. Sullivan declares that Cranston is described in the newspapers outside of the State as the only place in New England where gambling in pool selling can be carried on under legal protection.

BONAPARTE TO PAY FOR RIDES

WASHINGTON, D. C., July 12.—It is stated at the Navy Department that Secretary Bonaparte has returned free railroad passes that have been sent to him, with thanks for the courtesy, but saying that by reason of the public position he occupies he feels unable to avail himself of such consideration.

LOSS OF LIFE THREATENED IN COLLISION

Passengers on Winthrop and Sylvan Shore Give Officers High Praise.

Great loss of life was narrowly averted in Lynn harbor when the steamers Winthrop and Sylvan Shore, of the Lynn and Steamboat Company's line, collided in the channel during a thick fog. The Sylvan Shore, with 150 passengers, was on her way from Nahant to Lynn, and the Winthrop, with few passengers, was bound for Nahant.

The dense fog made navigation hazardous and whistles and horns were being blown on all sides, when the steamer Winthrop suddenly struck the Sylvan Shore well forward and turned her head toward the flats, where she grounded.

There was great confusion and many of the men donned life preservers. The women passengers were panic stricken and cried loudly for aid. In their frenzy several tried to jump overboard, but were restrained by the officers of the vessel. As the Sylvan Shore rested upon the mud flats she suddenly listed, and her passengers were again thrown into a state of excitement by the fear that she would topple over. All were transferred to the Winthrop and were taken to Lynn.

The collision is said by all who witnessed it to have been unavoidable. The fog was so dense that it was impossible to see the water from the deck and the channel was so narrow at that point that it was scarcely possible for vessels to pass each other safely in such a fog. The passengers on both vessels were unanimous in praising the efforts of the officers.

Neither boat was badly damaged.

FOUND 8-YEAR GIRL LASHED TO BANISTERS

Neighbors Heard Muffled Cries From House and Called in the Police.

MEDFORD, July 12.—Called in by neighbors to investigate a case of alleged cruelty to a child, Patrolman Golding found eight-year old Bessie Hardy, the child by the first wife of John G. Hardy, No. 166 Jerome street, West Medford, tied to a banister with a long rope around her entire chest, her hands crossed and bound by a quality strap and her elbows pinioned tight to her sides.

The child's stepmother, whom the policeman had forced to accompany him to the house, asserted that her husband had strapped the little girl where she was found, and that, as they both worked in Boston, Bessie was to remain pinioned all day until their return. Not even food was set before her, and had there been she could not have reached it.

Officer Golding ordered Mrs. Hardy to release the little one immediately. This was done, and she went to her day's labor, leaving Bessie in the house alone. The matter has been reported to the Massachusetts Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children, and the affair is to be probed immediately.

Mrs. Hardy, who has lived in West Medford a year, Bessie looks thin and ill, and has frequently shown bruises. At one time a doctor took four stitches in a wound in her head, said to have been caused by a fall from the back steps. There are those in the neighborhood who refuse to believe that story.

Several neighbors tell all kinds of stories of cruelties toward the child, who has run away two or three times. Women who have tried to interfere say that they were abused by Hardy and told to mind their own business. Finally someone sent word to the police and Officer Golding's visit was the result.

FEAR SALEM PASTOR IS LOST ON VOLCANO

Rev. Peter H. Goldsmith Started Alone to Make Ascent of Mt. Colima.

MEXICO, July 12.—The friends of Rev. Peter H. Goldsmith, of Salem, Mass., fear for his safety. He left the town of Tuxham to ascend Mt. Colima volcano and has been missing some time. The trip is under any circumstances a hazardous one, and is particularly so since the tarrancas, which traverse the mountain side, are filled with ashes from recent eruptions. Added to this danger is the fact that the volcano is showing signs of another violent eruption.

Mr. Goldsmith could not induce any natives to accompany him on the trip and he started alone, carrying his blanket and food supplies with him. It takes several days to reach the summit of the mountain.

The daring clergyman declared when he left Puebam that he was determined to reach the rim of the crater in order that he might obtain a photograph of the top of the boiling pit. Severe electrical storms play about the mouth of the crater almost constantly.

HULL HAS SEA SERPENT TALE

NANTASKET, July 12.—Henry Edwin Hatch, an unassuming fisherman of Gun Rock, who bears an unquestioned reputation for integrity, says he is ready to make affidavit before any justice of the peace that while in a boat with his wife about one mile off Simon's Farm beach on the morning of Monday, July 10, he saw a sea monster about 70 feet long with about forty black humps or curves about the size of a man's body along its back, and a head, which it occasionally raised above the surface of the water, as large as a sail boat.

The monster, which resembled a serpent in its movements, with great rapidity passed within 100 feet of the boat, furiously lashing the sea and leaving a wide wake in its course.

FAMOUS AUTHOR BURIED.

MANCHESTER, N. H., July 12.—The funeral of Walter Kittridge, author of "Tenting on the Old Campground" and other songs, took place at his home in Merrimac. Mr. Kittridge's famous song was sung as a part of the exercises.

WOMAN OF GLIDDEN PARTY IN AUTO CRASH

Narrowly Escapes Death, but Soon Proceeds on Way to Hartford.

By Duncan Curry,
Boston American's Special Representative on the Glidden tour.

HARTFORD, Ct., July 12.—Headed by Albert E. Pope in a forty-five-horse power Pope Toledo, the first flying squadron of Glidden tourists, who are now on their way to the White Mountains, bowled into this city shortly before noon yesterday, and by sunset all but one or two of the thirty-four motor cars which left New York had passed to the checkers at the Allyn House.

Only one accident of any importance occurred to mar the trip, and that was to car No. 17, a White steamer, owned and driven by Mrs. Joan Newton Cuneo of Richmond Hill, L. I., the only woman driver on the trip, and that no one was killed seemed little short of a miracle.

Mrs. Cuneo, while descending a steep hill between Greenwich and Stamford, came suddenly upon car No. 3, owned by Harlan W. Whipple of Andover, Mass., a former president of the A. A. A. W., who was stalled by a bad spot in the road. While Mrs. Cuneo saw him in time and slowed down her car, he suddenly began to back his car without any warning, so she had to choose between running him down, trying to slip through a five-foot space or fall into a trench which some workingmen were digging at the side of the road for telephone poles.

Mrs. Cuneo made an effort to swerve her car through the narrow space to the left of the Whipple car, and her left wheel slipped over the edge of a little stone bridge, which spanned a narrow brook, and the car, crashing through the flimsy rail, toppled over into the dry bed of the brook some eleven feet below the road, hurling all of the occupants, except Mrs. Cuneo, clear of the car.

The force of the fall drove Mrs. Cuneo's left leg through the steering wheel, and while not seriously broken, so tightly was her foot caught in the wheel that the workmen who came to the assistance of the party had to cut her shoe off before he could release her foot. Miss Grace Disbrow, who was Mrs. Cuneo's guest, also had a narrow escape from death, as when the car fell she turned a complete somersault over the steering wheel, but landed on soft ground. Andrew Cuneo, the husband of the driver of the car, and Louis A. Disbrow, a brother of Miss Disbrow, also escaped with a few bruises.

Car Was Righted.

As soon as Mrs. Cuneo was released from her trying position she ordered the workmen to help save the car, and, standing on the wreck of the bridge, directed the efforts and instructed them how to place the beams to raise the car from its side. Happily, when the car was righted and it was found that a new radiator and a new drip-pan were its only injuries. Mrs. Cuneo once more jumped into the steering seat and piloted the car all the way to Hartford, arriving here at 6:20 o'clock last evening.

Outside of a stirring race between Albert Pope and a White steamer, piloted by Walter C. White, which lasted all the way from New York to Hartford, there was very little speeding. Many of the natives seemed very friendly to the motorists, as at many points they warned some of the would-be road hurlers to beware of the constables who were hiding for the unwary behind friendly trees and barns and timing the tourists with alarm clocks. However, none of the tourists kept well within the speed limit, and no arrests were reported.

The roads were in fine condition, and the leading car, that of Albert Pope, as early as 6 o'clock, arrived in Hartford in ample time for a bath at the hotel, the run in New Haven and arrived in time for the dinner which was tendered them at the Allyn House last night, the invitations to which were in the form of a New York, New Haven & Hartford time table, which is certainly appropriate for this run, as the motor cars came far nearer to schedule time than they ever do on Mr. Mellen's trains.

The first five arrivals bowled into Hartford with Albert Pope driving a Pope Toledo in the lead. He arrived at 11:20 o'clock. With his car was the brother, A. W. Pope, and George Soules, who is accompanying him as mechanician. Albert Pope will drive his own car in the contest. Next to arrive was Mr. Pope Walter White, driving a White machine, appeared on the scene.

FOG TIES UP BOSTON HARBOR

The refreshing east wind, which tempered the heat, also brought into Boston harbor an impenetrable fog, which caused many changes in the schedules of harbor boats and tied up all shipping in the harbor.

The Portland boat Governor Dingley put back and did not sail until 11:05 p. m.; the Nantasket steamer Myles Standish went down to Nantasket at 10 o'clock, but was unlighted, and the Nantasket steamer Mayflower, after making three hours in coming from Nantasket to Boston, narrowly escaped running down a barge. Nantasket steamer service for Boston was stopped after 6:45 p. m., and extra trains were run to Boston from the points along the South Shore.

MRS. BANIGAN WINS FIGHT FOR CHILDREN'S PROPERTY

MOTHER AND TWO OF HER CHILDREN, WHOSE GUARDIANSHIP SHE HAS WON

Her Husband Relinquishes Guardianship and She Is Appointed.

PROVIDENCE, July 12.—Millionaire John Joseph Banigan, son of the late rubber king, has relinquished the guardianship of his three children. The wife had petitioned for his removal. The children are John Joseph, Richard D., and Mary Catherine. Mrs. Banigan is to be their guardian. Full accounts were filed on the estates. The Banigans are living apart. The bond of Mrs. Banigan is $245,000.

Several prominent lawyers appeared in court and it was expected that there would be some sort of a hearing, but Mr. Banigan sent in his resignation and there was nothing for the court to do but to appoint Mrs. Banigan to look after the property of her sons.

John Joseph Banigan is the son of the late Joseph Banigan, the "Rubber King." A year ago Mrs. Banigan applied for a decree of separate maintenance, charging gross and confirmed habits of intoxication and representing that her husband was wasting the large fortune he had inherited from his father. Mrs. Banigan also asked for the custody of the three children. A decree was granted Mrs. Banigan, with alimony of $1,000 a month, the custody of the children, a residence on Angell street, another house on Elmwood avenue, both fully furnished, and taxes to be paid.

There Are Three Boys, Grandsons of the Late Joseph Banigan, the "Rubber King."

BLACKMAILER OF SMART SET IS TRAPPED

Marked Bills for Suppression of "Scandal" Land Man in New York.

EXTENSIVE PLOT EXPOSED

By Boston American Leased Wire.

NEW YORK, July 12.—Names of the Vanderbilts, Astors, Twombleys, Mrs. Potter Palmer and others figure as apparent victims in an astounding swindling and blackmailing scheme revealed by the District Attorney's office.

The charges involve the society publication, Town Topics. They came to a head by the arrest of Charles H. Ahle, chief factor in the alleged plot, in the New York Stock Exchange Building.

Prosecution of the figures in the sensational affair is in the charge of Assistant District Attorney Kroteł. He has learned only in part how millionaires and members of the "400" were dragged into the swindlers' net. But he discovered that the scheme was far-reaching and remarkable.

The prisoner Ahle is a mystery. He is well dressed, smooth shaven, with soft voice and confidential manner, and has the appearance of a fashionable clubman. He wishes it to be understood that his only address is Northport, L. I. He is charged with attempted extortion, and will be formally arraigned in the Centre Street Police Court to-day.

Association of "Society Editors."

The alleged blackmail scheme, in which Mr. Ahle appears as a chief factor, was carried on in the name of the "Society Editors' Association," of No. 500 Fifth avenue. As Town Topics appears in the story of the development of the blackmail plot, it may be mentioned that the office of this publication is across the street. It appears from the literature of the "Society Editors' Association" that the officers are N. E. Wooster, manager; William L. Daniels, treasurer, and Charles Stokes Wayne, editor-in-chief. Incidentally it may be said that Mr. Wayne is also editor of Town Topics.

The machinery of the District Attorney's office was invoked to put a stop to the alleged blackmailing operations of Ahle on a complaint of Edwin M. Post, of the Tuxedo colony, a member of the firm of Thomas & Post, of No. 45 Broad street, who has a seat on the Stock Exchange. After Mr. Post lodged this complaint and the matter was submitted to Acting District Attorney Nott a trap was laid by Mr. Krotel, with Detective Flood, of Inspector Sweeney's staff, as chief aid, to catch Ahle "red handed" and to get strong evidence to support the charge of extortion.

How the Trap Was Laid.

The attempt of Ahle to get money from Mr. Post was based upon Mr. Post's domestic affairs and were of a nature which, although not scandalous, might be unpleasant if they became public in a garbled way. Mr. Post admitted to Assistant District Attorney Krotel that some time prior to the first visit of Mr. Ahle upon him he had had a slight disagreement with his wife, and that there had been talk in the Post household about Mr. Post having a title in mind, or, in which he took refuge. In spite of these false rumors that had entered the Post household, Mr. and Mrs. Post had lived together. And when Ahle made use of the Stamford incident, Mr. Post was willing to blackmail him. Mr. Post told his wife all about it and she joined with her in the fight against the law in the prosecution of the man who was endeavoring to extort money based on alleged marital troubles.

The first inkling of this alleged blackmailing scheme came to Mr. Post in his office in Broad street over the telephone on June 21, 1905. According to the affidavit made by Mr. Post, on that date, a person called him up on the telephone and said that he was Charles Stokes Wayne, the editor of Town Topics. Mr. Wayne is a lineal descendant of "Mad" Anthony Wayne of Stony Brook fame. Mr. Post reports the conversation over the 'phone in this wise:

Mr. Wayne—Will you see a man who will call at your office from me?

Mr. Post—I do not know you, Mr. Wayne. What is the business that this representative of yours will have with me?

Mr. Wayne—It is a purely personal matter that will be explained to you. I will send you a letter showing you that the matter is all right, and you can speak with my representative.

The following morning Charles A. Ahle called at the office of Mr. Post. He presented a letter bearing the heading of Town Topics and Journal of Society, No. 152 Fifth avenue, which read:

"Dear Sir—If you will kindly grant bearer, my representative, a brief interview on a matter entirely personal complimentary to you, I shall esteem it a favor.

"Yours truly,

"CHARLES STOKES WAYNE."

This was signed by Mr. Wayne, as managing editor.

"What is it you want?" said Mr. Post after reading the letter.

"I want," replied Mr. Ahle, "to get your subscription for the book issued by Town Topics and the Society Editors' Association, which is the edition de luxe, entitled 'America's Smart Set,' and the lowest subscription price is $100."

"Well," said Mr. Post, "I have not the money with me, and I prefer to see Mr. Wayne, who sent me this letter of introduction, and I certainly can't do this thing just now."

The Plot Exposed.

"There is a little matter," said Mr. Ahle, "that I might call to your attention. Town Topics has a typewritten statement which you perhaps would not like to see in print. This article refers to incidents in White's Studio, in Stamford, Ct., in which a woman is a leading factor. This article is on the list of publication, but if you will subscribe to a $500 edition of 'America's Smart Set' I can arrange to stop the publication of this story in Town Topics."

"This is a very startling matter," said Mr. Post, "and I must have a little time to think about it. I have not omitted with invested on a rising market, and it looks as if in a few days I may have a very good bunch of money. Then I shall be able to do business with you."

"Oh, I will give you all the time you like," said Mr. Ahle, "and will call again."

It was arranged between Mr. Post and Ahle that Ahle should have a meeting on June 27. Ahle did not appear at the appointed place, and Mr. Post, being alarmed and being convinced that Ahle was trying to extort money from him, consulted with Mr. Krotel. Then this telegram was sent:

Unicon A, Ahle, care Charles S. Wayne, Town Topics.

Please do not let article come out to-morrow. Have arranged for money Friday. Am writing you.

E. M. POST.

Sends Letter to Ahle.

Mr. Post did not receive any response to this telegram and on June 28 sent this note:

Dear Mr. Ahle—I was afraid that your people might have sent the article to-morrow, so I sent you a wire from Newport, saying that I had arranged the money part and would have it on Friday. I am sorry that I was not in, but did if the market had not gone up I do not know what I could have done. I will certainly have been in a bad way. If any publication has been given to the story that I was mixed up with some women, and such other things as would have doubtless made interesting reading, this would have been very unpleasant to me. But I suppose you are on your vacation, and what is to prevent my being written up during your absence, and, if so, what would I have gained? Your friends will have the money and I will have the little end of the stick.

I think you ought to get a line from Wayne saying that any arrangements that you will make will be carried out. This is all quite mean, and I cannot afford any publicity, such as the articles will mean. Drop me a line at the Stock Exchange to-morrow saying what you can do about this part of it, and come down Friday at 2:30 p. m., when you can settle up, or rather, when I can pay up.

EDWIN M. POST.

Mr. Post was satisfied that the letter was delivered to Ahle, but for some reason yet to be explained the appointment was not kept by Ahle.

Ahle, however, came down to Mr. Post's office on July 7. He said that more details in regard to the standard business had just been received by Town Topics. Ahle said that it came in the shape of a typewritten message from a prominent woman in Stamford.

"I would very much like to know," said Mr. Post, "who this woman is, as I can have no idea where such information comes from."

Mr. Post was seeking information for the District Attorney's office—seeking to find out all the persons who might be connected with his scheme of extortion.

Another Demand for the Money.

"Come and talk to me this woman is," said Ahle, "but she is trusted by Wayne implicitly. We cannot wait any longer about this matter. This story has got to be suppressed."

"While I am perfectly willing to pay the money," said Mr. Post, "I do not want to go into it until I can get another look at the matter. Please call again, when it is all right. Just bring me a note from Wayne and I will pay up."

Last Saturday Ahle turned up at Mr. Post's office without the note. He was cursed and told Mr. Post that the money must be paid on Tuesday or the story would be published. Yesterday being the day of payment, the plot to capture Ahle was carried out in detail. Detective Flood and Assistant District Attorney Krotel met Mr. Post at the Stock Exchange. Flood and there Flood marked five $100 bills. Flood went to a down upstairs and concealed himself behind the screen. Mr. Post and Ahle, on the suggestion of the latter that they go to a place where they could talk in secret, Post took Ahle to the upstairs room, where the watchful Flood was waiting.

"I am going to give you $500, Mr. Ahle, in consideration of your withholding the publication of the story in Town Topics," said Mr. Post.

Tell of Others Who Have Paid.

"Very generous," said Ahle, "is just as good as Wayne's, and you can take it from me that for this trifling sum you will never hear of this story again. Why, I can tell you what is going on, the editor of Town Topics has had scandals in the office for which $10,000 and $20,000 have been paid to keep from publication. Why, except that I was mixed up in it myself, I could subscribed for a book known as Fads and Frailties, for which $500 each succeeded it. You are in the same position."

"Under these circumstances I am willing to pay," said Mr. Post. Then he counted out the five $100 bills and gave Ahle a receipt.

The moment the receipt was delivered Flood stepped from behind the screen and said: "You are under arrest, Mr. Ahle."

"What for?" asked Ahle, cool and apparently unconcerned.

"For attempted extortion," said Mr. Krotel, drawing a pair of handcuffs into view. "I warn you that any statement you may make may be used against you in this or other proceedings."

NO HOPE OF SAVING CREW OF SUBMARINE

BIZERTA, Tunis, July 12.—The divers are trying to make a tunnel under the submarine boat Farfadet, which still lies deeply imbedded in the mud bottom of the harbor, in the hope that they will thereby be able to pass hawsers around the boat and hoist her to the surface. All hope of saving the crew has been abandoned.

CAPTAIN JAMES T. MORSE HURRIES BACK TO BOSTON

Mysterious Move on Part of Uncle of One of the Principals in Noted Marital Tangle.

Captain James T. Morse, who has become involved in the sensational case of the Morse-Dodge divorce case, is on his way back to Boston, if not already here. He left Rutland, Vt., with his automobile and went to Bellows Falls, continuing down on the way to Massachusetts.

Captain Morse, who has admitted interfering in the marital affairs of his nephew, Charles W. Morse, in the interest of the latter's children, who, as he thought, were in danger of losing their father's love through his marriage, has acted mysteriously since his attitude in the famous case has become known. When he appeared in Rutland, Vt., he was said to be on his way to Burlington. He is now back in Massachusetts. He still refuses to discuss his nephew's divorce case.

LAWYER SUES GIRL FOR PART IN HEART BALM

Millionaire Walsh of Colorado Said to Have Paid Big Sum to Her.

40 PER CENT. DEMANDED

By Boston American Leased Wire.

NEW YORK, July 12.—Remarkable charges are made in three suits brought by Detlief C. Hansen, a lawyer, of No. 431 West Thirty-fourth street, against Thomas F. Walsh, the multi-millionaire Colorado mine owner, and Miss Violette Watson, who Hansen says, sued Walsh for $300,000, alleging breach of promise of marriage and non-support, and then settled the case out of court.

So remarkable, in fact, are Hansen's charges that Mr. Walsh's attorneys have asked District Attorney Jerome to investigate them.

Hansen is suing for the legal services he alleges he rendered to Miss Watson. He says she agreed to pay him 40 per cent. of whatever judgment he obtained against the millionaire.

As the case was settled out of court, he says, he does not know how much Miss Watson received. On the other hand, Mr. Walsh's lawyers say that the millionaire never paid Miss Watson a cent.

In Hansen's affidavit Miss Watson is described as twenty-two years old, granddaughter of a retired general of the British army and daughter of Henry E. Watson, who has large business interests in Paris. Hansen swears that the girl was taken from a convent and brought here by Mr. Walsh as his ward, and that later Mr. Walsh, according to the girl's story, promised to marry her.

Mr. Walsh is already married, and only recently returned home with his family to spend the Summer season at Newport, where he has leased a Vanderbilt cottage at a rental of $100,000.

CHAMPION OF ALL LAZY MEN LIVES IN UTAH

arlson Won't Work and Is oo Weary to Go Away From Home to Beg.

SALT LAKE CITY, July 10.—It will no nger be correct to speak of the tramp d the vagrant as "Weary Willie." Here- fter he will be known as a "Carlson." he distinction of changing things belongs a Utah man, and Salt Lake has another rel to add to her crown.

E. G. Carlson, who was tried in police urt on a charge of vagrancy, gets the im as the laziest man in the world, if estimony adduced is correct, and there's o reason to disbelieve it, as Carlson ot deny it.

After the complaint was read Carlson he was unable to understand English well, and Deputy Sheriff Axel Steele called as an interpreter. After a conation in Swedish Steele said that Carlson had admitted his guilt. Carlson said he had worked for a year, and then he gned his begging to his employer was apparently too weary to enlarge cope of his begging operations.

Judge Otehi said that he would inflict a final sentence, and that in the meantime the county physician would be called examine Carlson to see if he was a fit ase for investigation before an insanity mission. Carlson was sentenced to thirty days in jail. He seemed thoroughly satisfied and smiled in a weak way. hough even that had cost him too great effort, and lounged into a seat on the ners' bench.

PROF WOOD, FAMOUS BLOOD EXPERT, DIES

Noted Harvard Chemist Succumbs to Cancer at Summer Home in Pocasset.

POCASSET, July 12.—After a long illness with cancer of the intestines, Professor Edward S. Wood, the world's greatest expert on blood in the United States, is dead at his Summer home here, where he was removed from Boston a week ago.

Dr. Wood was finally compelled to give up his duties as professor of chemistry at Harvard Medical School about four months ago, when he was taken to Carney Hill Hospital, Brookline.

An exploratory operation revealed the fact that he was suffering from cancer of the intestines, and that there was no hope of his recovery. His physicians professed to be sanguine that the disease would not result fatally, but Professor Wood established on illusions and knew that the end could not be far distant. He kept up his spirits, however, and even while lying on his bed at the hospital continued to direct some of his medical work.

Mrs. Wood and a nurse were at the bedside when the end came.

Testified in Tucker Case.

Professor Wood had gained fame through his frequent testimony as a blood expert in murder trials. His last case was that in which he determined the difference between bloodstains found on the clothing of Charles L. Tucker, convicted at East Cambridge for the murder of Miss Mabel Page at her home in Weston.

He was also called in as an expert in Boston's water problem, and was employed in compiling the present United States pharmacopoia. He translated and revised works on urine, and made a lasting reputation by works on poisons.

His jurisprudence he was famous for his blood tests. He was an authority on blood in Europe and America.

Had Been at Harvard Since 1876.

Personally Dr. Wood was most genial. Modesty was one of his prominent traits. Among his circle of friends and acquaintances included most of the leading medical men and lawyers of this part of the country.

Professor Wood was married in 1883 to Miss Elizabeth Richardson. His daughter married Dr. Briggs of Tufts Medical School.

He was born in Cambridge, on April 28, 1846, and is therefore 59 years old. His father, Alfred Wood, was one of the partners in the grocery firm of Wood & Hall, which for many years did business in Harvard square. After graduating from the public schools Prof. Wood was fitted for Harvard College, from which he was graduated in 1867, and then took the medical course of four years, graduating in 1871.

His afterward studied in Europe and upon his return became assistant professor of chemistry. In 1876 he was appointed professor of chemistry, which position he held until his death.

WOMEN GLOBE TROTTERS HAPPY WHEN SMOKING

German Doctor and Companion, Puffing Manila Weeds, Attract Attention.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 10.—Mrs. G. Naumann and Miss Elizabeth Heydel are from Germany, where Miss Heydel, who wears her hair cropped in a well shaped head, is a doctor of medicine. They are traveling around the world and landed here from the Hong Kong liner Mongolia.

Except for the brevity of the Heydel locks there is no great distortions. Well groomed and wearing many of the outward signs of a well filled pocketbook, would attract little attention on the crowded decks of a liner or in the thronged corridors of a hotel. But on the Manchuria this pair of wanderers from the fatherland attracted more attention than did Major General Leonard Wood. They are not like other girls.

During the Manchuria's voyage across the Pacific, at almost any hour of the day or evening, in a cozy corner of that massive paradise, the smoking room, the short, cropped woman doctor from the Kaiser's realm and Mrs. Naumann, her rosy cheeked friend, could be found chatting quietly and each puffing at a long, black cigar. And when thirst troubled the smokers the cigars were laid aside and fair lips sipped "steins" from the biggest tumblers furnished by the Manchuria's commissary department.

And they are proud of it.

"I have smoked for twenty years, boasts Dr. Heydel.

"I like German cigars best of all," admits Mrs. Naumann.

But each of them paid duty on several hundred Manila cigars.

"To smoke on the way home," they explained to the bewildered customs inspector who searched their baggage.

BALKED WHEN SHE SAW HIM

JERSEY CITY, July 12.—Smith Pierce, a carpenter, of Plymouth, Mass., advertised eight months ago for a wife. He fell in love with one of his correspondents and asked her to meet him at the Jersey Central railroad station here last night, when he welcomed her there, he found she was deaf and dumb. He was willing to marry her, but she refused to become his wife, and the groom was afraid of him.

She came from Ohio, and returned home on a train early this morning. Pierce was disconsolate.

BROWN-TAILS WILL BE GONE IN TEN DAYS

Will Have Laid Their Eggs and Died in That Time, If Not Blown Away Before.

The brown-tail moth is in possession of Boston, but only for ten days at the most, says the Gypsy Moth Commission, and perhaps not so long if a breeze, stiff enough to carry them away, visits the city.

The life of the brown-tail moth in the moth state is about ten days. Then it ceases to some convenient leaf or the stem of a tree, lays its eggs and dies.

These eggs will germinate and bring forth the little caterpillars about the latter part of August, and from these again enter the winter. H. H. ROGERS HAS GIVEN OVER $2,000,000 TO NATIVE TOWN

THE FAIRHAVEN INN, WHICH WILL KEEP OPEN THE YEAR ROUND.

Standard Oil Magnate's Latest Fairhaven Benefaction Is Nearing Completion.

FAIRHAVEN, July 12.—The hotel which Henry H. Rogers, the Standard Oil magnate, is having built in Fairhaven, his residence and native town, is rapidly nearing completion. It is being built from plans drawn by Charles A. Brigham of Boston, the same architect who designed the million-dollar memorial church which Mr. Rogers recently gave.

This hotel, to be known as the Fairhaven Inn, will cost $100,000 and will be kept open the year round, regardless of profit. So that Fairhaven will not only have this hostelry open during the flourishing Summer months, but will be sure of its convenience during the quieter Winter time.

The hotel makes a unique addition to a long list of Rogers's benefactions to the town. Mr. Rogers has presented land, buildings, roads and money directly or indirectly to Fairhaven.

His first prominent gift was the Rogers's

What Millionaire Rogers Has Done for Fairhaven

Memorial Church	1,000,000
Hotel	100,000
Macadamized Roads (Estimated)	75,000
Total	2,045,000

School building, costing $75,000. Then he gave the Millicent Library, costing $250,000, as a memorial to his daughter, Miss Millicent G. Rogers. This was followed by the Town Hall, costing $400,000, the memory of his first wife, and then by the Masonic Building, which cost $45,000.

One of the latest and most costly of his gifts is the million-dollar Rogers' memorial church, including a parsonage and parish house.

An indirect gift to the town was the presentation to the Millicent Library of the Rogers's Water Works. The Library was well endowed when built, but the receipts from the water works will guarantee an additional permanent income of about $8,000 a year. The value of the water works is $100,000.

Then Mr. Rogers has given Fairhaven miles of macadamized roads, good side walks and shade trees. He is superintendent of streets and public buildings for Fairhaven, an office generally held by multi-millionaires.

In all, the gifts of Mr. Rogers to his native town represent an expenditure of over $2,000,000.

Long List of Gifts Ranges From Good Roads to Million-Dollar Church.

PRISON GUARD'S THIRD ARREST

WINDSOR, Vt., July 12.—For the third time Alvah Sanderson has been arrested and taken to the county jail at Woodstock charged with escape while under sentence, while he was guard at the State prison here. The present complaint is brought by State's Attorney Fred Fleetwood. The person is accused of carrying to and from a prisoner communications, newspapers, matches, etc., without the knowledge of the superintendent.

Sanderson was acquitted a week ago on the charge of furnishing morphine, opium and whiskey to prisoners. He was also arrested for the alleged larceny of shoes from the prison shop. He was out on bail for this second charge when re-arrested.

MYSTERY IN SUPPOSED SUICIDE CASE

Letter in Vacant Stateroom Told of Ambrose's Intention to Kill Himself.

What has become of Frank S. Ambrose of No. 60 Cliff street, Roxbury? Did he commit suicide, or is he alive and temporarily insane?

The members of his family are still in doubt as to what has become of him. They are at a loss for a reason for suicide, save the fact that his health was none too good. He had only recently been married, his family life appeared to be of great happiness, and his father, George T. Ambrose, a retired business man, is well to do.

Stateroom Was Vacant.

Monday, it is said, he came to Boston from Gardiner, where he had been staying with her parents, with the intention of taking the steamer Bay State to Portland. His family knew that he was going to do so. When the Bay State arrived in Portland Tuesday morning the stateroom that he had engaged was vacant, and in the steamship's officers found two letters that told of his intention of killing himself, giving as a reason that he was tired of living. The letter was also received yesterday morning by George Wilson, his cousin, telling of similar intentions.

If Ambrose did commit suicide, his family attributes it to ill-health. He was of very nervous disposition, and a few months ago, his relatives state, was obliged to give up his position on account of his nerves. Since that time he had been growing more or less, though he appeared to be happy. He was married in May, 1904, and although the wedding couple slept in different rooms and made few acquaintances, neighbors noticed that they appeared to be very happy.

Thinks She Saw Ambrose.

The mystery is increased by the fact that Mrs. May Everett, an employe in the office of the clerk of the Supreme Court, is certain that she saw Ambrose at No. 60 Cliff street about 7:30 or 8 o'clock, Monday night, an hour after the Portland boat sailed. She, too, Miss Sallie Viles, who lives in the suite across the hall, thinks she heard the door of the Ambrose suite shut at about 8 o'clock.

"DENVER BOB" GATHERED IN

Denver Bob, known as Buffalo Bill's double, after a life of exciting adventures to the West, very quietly took a glass too many, very quietly went to sleep in a doorway at the North End, and was then very quietly arrested by a patrolman, who didn't even have to show a gun.

He was in the '49 rush, fought in the Civil War and with Custer, and travelled with Buffalo Bill. He has lived out where it takes a marshal with a reputation and a big revolver to make an arrest, but the policeman who took him in was not compelled to manifest his possession of either.

Political action by organized labor generally is urged by Boston Rooters' Protective Union in a resolution regarding the matter of the government loosening the screws on the Chinese exclusion act "so as to admit freely the degree of ordinary, common and professional men," will bring degradation and want upon the American people.

The representatives of the commercial bodies of Boston will go to Washington in an interview with President Roosevelt on the matter, without regard to the attitude of the great union labor organizations of the country.

Through the proper channel the Rooters' Union will request the Massachusetts Federation of Labor to have all affiliated unions throughout the country ascertain the attitude of the senators and representatives in their district upon the matter of Chinese exclusion, and to act on the same accordingly.

"As the Republican party is in power," concludes the resolution, "it will be held responsible to that great intelligent force" can vote if there is any modification or lenience of the Chinese exclusion act where by families will be brought to degradation and want."

MOURN LOST MEMBER.

Painters Union No. 11 has passed resolutions of regret on the death of Thomas Dwyer, an old member, who was killed by falling from a staging in Maine. The members of Local No. 7 were shocked to hear of the tragic death of Mr. Dwyer, who had many friends.

He lived on Sixth street, South Boston. He was one of the oldest employes of F. W. Dodge Manufacturing company, of this city. A committee was appointed to represent Local No. 11 at the funeral.

Ex-Mayor Josiah Quincy, Thomas A. Mullen and L. C. Gettinger addressed the meeting called in behalf of the People's Legal Security Company.

At New York—New York, 6; Chicago, 5 (10 innings).
At Brooklyn—Pittsburg, 11; Brooklyn, 2.
Total attendance (235 games).....1,460,342

There is some life in the game with Manager Joe playing the field and the fans like to see him off the bench.

Harly, who essayed to pitch the first game against the Reds, was going along O. K. helped by some remarkable fielding, when the bumps came in earnest in the seventh round and his name was mud as the team had no show with Ewing pitching his gilt edge form.

The day finally ended in the fans by storm came in the fourth when bases were filled. Steinfeldt hit a sharp grounder to Wolverton, who fanned on Moran, cutting off the run. Then Pat divided the ball to Corcoran, and Steinfeldt by several feet. Corcoran, who was on third, made a dash for the plate on Moran's throw, but he not pinched at the pan by Tenney's quick return.

A doubleheader, beginning at 2 o'clock, at the South End Grounds, will make a long afternoon of the diamond sport, and its pretty safe figuring that the Reds and the Tennesseans will have a couple of battles that will tickle the palates of the fans.

The Redlegs are good opponents to watch and play up to the muggin while in action.

They got away with the first of the series, but they were held off in good shape, and only by coming strong at the finis succeeded in getting under the wire in time.

Tenney's men are sure to count to-day with the two chances offered, and they are not likely to get pasted to the background both times.

With Willis and Fraser to depend on they might flop the Reds twice in succession as the vets ought to be working well and be at their strongest, the first game of the week for them. With the proper backing up by the rest of the men, the out-fielders in any club could be far more

Kelley will probably pick out Harper and Walker or above in Overall if the first game goes against him. Eddie Phelps will wear the mask.

Bridwell, the youngster wonder and star infielder is shining out by the veterans. Corcoran and Steinfeldt doing the shifty act because he may not get in the games here.

CHSTONY, C. TO HOLD CRUISE

Special to the Boston American.

HULL, July 12.—The Boston Yacht Club will start on its annual cruise next Saturday, July 15, the destination being, as was last year, Five Islands, Me. It is expected that the fleet of both sailing and power boats will be the largest that has participated in any club cruise for many years.

The cruise will be divided into classes as follows:

First class—Schooners, yawls and sloops of 45 feet over all length.

Second class—Schooners, yawls and sloops 37 feet and not over 45 feet over all length.

Third class—Schooners, yawls and sloops less than 37 feet over all length.

EASTERN LEAGUE RESULTS.
At Buffalo—Baltimore 5, Buffalo 1.
At Toronto—Toronto 2, Worcester 0.
At Montreal—Providence 9, Montreal 3.
At Rochester—Rochester 8, Jersey City 2.

O'ROURKE HAS MATCH IN WEST

Charley O'Rourke, the Cambridge middleweight, has gone to Indianapolis to meet Hugo Kelley in a fifteen-round battle.

As Kelley has beaten Jack O'Brien, the winner's end for O'Rourke will put him up in the class again. The Cambridge boy has been getting in shape quietly for the match, and left yesterday for the West.

KID SULLIVAN IS A GAME FIGHTER

SAN FRANCISCO, July 12.—Notwithstanding that Kid Sullivan has fought a great many of the best little men in the East and is a well-advertised fighter, the local followers of the game are writing to experts back there for a better line on the lad who hooks up with Jimmy Britt late this month. Yesterday the mail brought to Biddy Bishop a letter from Harry Tuthill, Young Corbett's old trainer, who is well known in this city, in which Tuthill tells Bishop that Sullivan, in his opinion, is a good boy—in fact, the best Eastern production that has happened in a long while, and Tuthill thinks as well of him that he is very strongly considering placing a big bet on the kid from Hertford's stable of scrappers, and he advises Bishop to do the same.

Tuthill says Sullivan has all the real things a fighter needs—gameness, strength the wallop, cleverness to spare, together with a fair amount of speed. Tuthill says Britt will never be able to knock Sullivan out.

Tuthill ought to know what he is talking about, for he has been in the game a number of years and has always been rated a shrewd fellow with a good head, and then, too, he has seen Sullivan in action against "Young Corbett" at Baltimore, and possibly Harry recalls this fight to memory in framing up his opinion of the kid who hopes to win his battle with Jimmie Edwards.

STINSON RIDING WELL.

Bill Stinson, who will be one of the contestants in the bicycle race at Revere Beach Saturday, is riding finely in practice and going better each and every time. He is full of confidence on account of his last race, and the fact that he won makes him feel that his "hoodoo" has left him at last. Hard luck has caused him to lose dozens of races, but in another man it would have induced retirement long ago.

ADVERTISERS WILL PLAY FOR 30 CUPS

By Boston American Leased Wire.

NEW YORK, July 12.—A special train over the Erie will leave Jersey City Sunday afternoon to take to Cleveland such members of The American Golf Association of Advertising Interests, as will participate in the association's golf tourney at Cleveland, July 14 to 20. The train will consist of a baggage car, dining car and three or four sleeping cars. The train will run as a second section of Erie's train No. 3—the Chicago Limited—and will run direct to Cleveland by way of Marlboro, and Lewisville, reaching Cleveland Monday morning at 7 a. m. The golfers will give the golfers ample time for practice over the Euclid Club grounds, where the tournament is to be played.

Including the ladies, the party is expected to number eighty or ninety. Among the passengers on the train will be:

Steven R. Ayres, George Batten, O. H. Blackman, H. E. Call, J. E. Erickson, J. H. Hanley, Harry A. Kaufman, Walter C. Patterson, B. H. Porter, Frank Presbrey, Horace W. Simms, W. J. Simmons, J. C. Sutford, W. P. Purdie, Jr., and Charles W. Yates, all advertising agents of this city; Charles Palmer, manager of the Boston Newspaper Publishers' Association; W. H. Rankin, Jr., of the Rankin Advertising Company, Chicago; E. P. Call, the Commercial, New York; the Evening Mail; A. E. Dunn, the Mercantile; Burt B. Foster, American Advertiser; Robert Frothingham, Life; S. C. Halliwell, Bowling; Mathewson, Outing; Edward Marshall, Herald; Collier's Weekly; Albert Mottram, Outing; Leo Lee Mayer, Collier's Weekly; Frank Munsey, Springfield (Mass.) Union; Charles Pardridge, Princeton Alumni Weekly; A. R. Rankin, The Ledger and Dwyer Junior Sports, The Ledger; C. C. Vernam, Aladdin's Magazine; J. R. Wood, Collier's; Wood, News, and W. K. Woodward, Public Opinion.

The advertising men have thirty cups and trophies to compete for. Their headquarters at Cleveland will be at the Hollenden, where the annual meeting will be held Monday night. At the conclusion of the golf match the Ad Club of Cleveland, and the Cleveland daily papers will unite in a banquet to the visitors on Wednesday evening.

COURTNEY IN FAVOR OF A 3-MILE COURSE

ITHACA, N. Y., July 11.—Coach Charles E. Courtney of the Cornell navy is emphatically in favor of shortening the distance for the intercollegiate race for varsity eights from four to three miles. He said:

"Ever since the Poughkeepsie regatta was started and the four-mile course was used I have been against it. It is wrong and unfair to ask for a four-mile race when there is no necessity for it. "Most of the races at Poughkeepsie are won at the three-mile point, anyway, as was the one this year, and the extra mile pulls just so much more unnecessarily out of the men in the boats.

The decision, if any, will not be made till the next meeting of the stewards of the Intercollegiate Rowing Association. These men are Judge Frank Irvine for Cornell, Francis S. Bangs for Columbia and Thomas Keith for Pennsylvania.

CONN. GOLF TO-DAY.

NEW HAVEN, July 12.—More than 125 entries have been received for the seventh annual golf tournament of the Connecticut League, which will begin here to-day. Three former State champions, Dr. Carl Martin of Greenwich, Charles H. Seeley of Stamford and R. S. Patterson of Bridgeport, are entered, though it is not certain that Seeley and Patterson will start. The list is the largest ever entered for this tournament.

TEUTON ROWING HONORS SOUGHT BY AMERICANS

Special Cable to Boston American.

HAMBURG, Germany, July 12.—The American champion amateur senior double scull oarsmen, J. J. Mulcahy and William M. Darley, who are entered in the annual regatta of the North German Rowing Society, which will be held on Lake Alster, near this city, on July 15 and 16, have arrived here. The men will wear the colors of the Atlanta Boat Club, of New York City.

This being the first entry ever received from the United States for the premier regatta in Germany, there is much interest evinced in the men. They will row for the Kaiser's trophy, which is given by the German Emperorer for the double scull race. Only once since this race has been rowed has the trophy been taken out of the country, and then the Londonera captured it. Whether Mulcahy and Darley can duplicate the Englishmen's feat is worrying the German oarsmen, who are eagerly waiting to see the men in their boat for their first practice.

The New York champions were met by Dr. Ruppert, secretary of the North German Rowing Society, and a big delegation of the Hamburg Hensley Regatta Committee, and received a warm reception. Their headquarters are located on the edge of Lake Alster, and a shed has been specially constructed to shelter their shell from possible injury.

G. L. WRENN IN TOURNEY

NEW YORK, July 12.—The ranking lawn tennis players of the country will meet on the courts of the Seabright Lawn Tennis and Cricket Club at Seabright, N. J., next week in an invitation tournament, under the direction of the U. S. N. L. T. Association. Among the competitors will be such men as G. L. Wrenn, Jr., E. B. Dewhurst, R. Le Roy, F. B. Alexander and H. H. Hackett.

The cups offered for the doubles were presented by Mrs. T. N. McCarter. The one that will be contested for in the singles was given by Mrs. F. Archelis in 1902. It is a challenge trophy, and must be won three times to become the property of the holder, who is at present William A. Larned.

INVADER TAKES TO THE WATER

A large crowd attended the launching of the handsome steel schooner Invader, built for Vice-Commodore Roy A. Halsey of the Larchmont Y. C. at Lawley's shipyard. She is 136 feet over all, 95 feet on the water line, 25 beam and 13 feet draught, with centre board to enable her to make use of some of the shoaler harbors on Long Island Sound.

TWO GAMES BOOKED IN WINDY CITY TO-DAY

"CY" YOUNG AND JESSE TANNEHILL WILL PITCH FOR THE BOSTON CHAMPS.

By Boston American Leased Wire.

CHICAGO, July 12.—A double-header between the Boston Americans and the Chicago White Sox will be played here this afternoon.

This is made necessary because the Bostons have three postponed games in this city, one from the previous trip and two this time.

Young and Altrock will most likely be the opposing pitchers in the first game, which will start at two o'clock.

Tannehill and either Smith or Owen are the six-starters scheduled to work in the second contest.

Young and Altrock recently pitched an eleven-inning tie game. If the veteran "Cy" can only be helped along with a little timely stick-work, he should dethrone Chicago from the lead in the American League, temporarily at least.

Tanny May Cause Trouble.

Tannehill should cause the Windy City aggregation much trouble. It will be remembered that when the race was closest last season, and on the trip which broke so badly for Boston, Tanny stood by the guns and not only whipped the other clubs, but beat the White Sox two out of four games right in their own ballpark.

Left-handed pitchers are tough cheese for the Chicagos, and if Tanny's right it would not be surprising to see him pull out ahead. At present he is the leading pitcher of the Bostons in percentage of games won, and he will have a good chance to improve his average.

Beating with his share of luck may take both games from Chicago. Although this is an unusual performance for any team, the 11th Chemps stand in a fair way to accomplish that feat to-day.

It is conceded by many fans that both Young and Tannehill have it on any twirlers in the White Sox camp, and if they keep up their present form, will throw rings around Altrock and any other gunner that Fielder Jones will select for the rubber.

Chicagos Over-Anxious.

The Chicagos are over-anxious to take both games to-day, now that they are in the lead, as there is no time like the present to get a grip on the pennant.

However, as Boston has always been a hard opponent for Comiskey's warriors, Jones expects the going to be close all the way through.

It was disappointing to both the Bostons and Chicago teams to be obliged to cancel the first two games on account of rain. The Hub players learned about the conference of the Hotel Lexington all day, and not once ventured outside doors.

Olmstead Has Reported.

Olmstead, the Jersey City pitcher, who was with the Champs in the spring practice, has joined the team and is ready to take his regular turn in the box. He is in good form, and hopes to make a success when he gets a chance.

Criger, Gibson and Stahl visited their homes over night and they are expected to arrive back before noon.

It is doubtful if Manager Collins will sign Catcher Armbruster of the New London team, as they want too much money for him.

Grimshaw is up and around, but is still weak from his recent illness.

Ben Johnson called at the hotel last night, previous to a trip to St. Louis, where he wants to have a confidential chat with Jake Stahl.

SYSONBY MAY RACE ARTFUL AT SPA

NEW YORK, July 12.—When seen at the Whitney stable at the race track to-day Harry Payne Whitney's trainer, Rogers, said he had heard nothing of the proposed sweepstake between Artful and Sysonby: "I do not believe Artful will go back to Brighton. When she ran in the handicap she cut herself, and she is now suffering with a swollen hock. It is nothing serious, but it bothers her a little. And then there is the transportation to be taken into consideration. I am sure the mare would not like traveling in this warm weather. I think you will be safe in saying that Artful will not be sent back to Brighton."

"Is there any possibility of Sysonby and Artful meeting later in the season?" Mr. Rogers was asked.

"I do not know about that," he replied. "Artful is in the 'cup' at Saratoga, but I am not sure that Sysonby is entered. The Cup is a mile and quarter, and it is probable that Artful will go."

When a newspaper at Saratoga was suggested Mr. Rogers said: "Artful will be in Saratoga's hands when she is right. If she goes against Sysonby it will be a great race, but only one horse can win."

Notes of the Harness Horses

The stallion Patronage, sire of Alix (2.05¾), is now owned by J. H. Darling of Natick.

Ira B. Moore, Manchester, N. H., has a five-year-old mare by W. Lawrence Patchener (2.09), and has placed her in Walter Cox's hands for development.

Word comes from England that Prince Alert has been changed to the trotting gait.

Tudor Chimes, to Chimes, pulled a wagon a half in 1.01½ on the Empress City track and on the New York speedway he showed 1.04½ for the distance.

Gill O'Carry brought two trotters East, sired by McKinney. They are owned in Wonsocket, R. I.

Tom Marsh's Eight Hand was seen when driving Kidd the other day over the 2.20 class at Dover, as he was forced Walter Cox to mark Argonut in 2.09¾.

New England seems to be the harness racing ground of the country, as the number of horses engaged up this way than in the Middle States or the great West.

Peter B. was getting the best of Opulence at the Hill's Dover meet when Young Faehner was requested to take the mount. The change had its effect, and the black pulling won a good race.

Bert G., the East Boston race horse, is going well in Gilmore's hands, and will head a summary soon. He was second to Bingham at Dover in 2.15¾.

Tenney, to Quercho, son of Alcyone, was given a record in a special at Island Park of 2.16¾. This is a good performance, considering that he is a Richmond, who drove him, declares he can trot in 2.12.

TEN COMMANDMENTS OF LOVE

Dorothy Dix Lays Down Rules for Young Folks

The second commandment.

TRUST ME ALL IN ALL, OR NOT AT ALL

LOVE is one of the affairs of life that is bound to be run on a credit basis. The minute your confidence is shaken, and your trust withdrawn, Cupid makes an assignment and goes into bankruptcy.

A great many people are of such a suspicious disposition that they never entirely believe in anybody. These never know the full glory and sweetness of love. Their doubts make a blight for them at the heart of the rose; their fears are a drop of gall at the bottom of the wine cup. The perfect joy of love demands perfect faith. That is the inexorable law.

To many this will seem a hard saying, for, curiously enough, the majority of people think that they can rely upon love and question it without frightening it away, whereas in truth it is a heavenly visitant that abides only with the devout believer.

Men find it easier than women to keep the second commandment of love. There are many reasons why this should be so. One is that men are more accustomed to taking things on trust than women are.

Another is that men have more variety than women and put a higher estimation upon their ability to charm.

If a man once wins a woman's love, it never occurs to him that he could by any possibility lose it, while a woman lives in continual dread and apprehension of losing a man's affection, no matter how devoted he is to her.

A third reason, and a most potent one, is that woman is not only more trustworthy in love than a man, but all the powers of society and convention are allied to keep her that way. A woman has far less temptation to be untrue to a man than he has to her.

Wherefore, a man finds it easier to keep the second commandment of love.

On the other hand, women are doubting Thomases by nature. In the slang of the day every woman, in her heart, comes from Missouri, and requires to be shown—and even when she is shown still has her suspicions. She distrusts her own power to win a man's love to begin with, and she doubly distrusts her ability to hold it when she has acquired tripled chins and grizzled hair.

Observation shows her that a man's fancy is as fickle as the wind, and the thing that he admires most in the woman-to-day may bore him to death in her to-morrow.

More than that, she knows that the world is leagued together to rob her of her love.

Younger and fairer women, gayer company, the absorption of business or professional or political ambition, all tend to wean the man she worships away from her; and so, while she thinks she has complete confidence in him, she keeps one eye on his stenographer and goes through his pockets to see if he has any letters in a feminine handwriting.

The pathos of doubting love is the futility of it. After all, the faith of another person must be taken on faith. The cleverest man on earth is not so clever but what the silliest little woman can deceive him if she will.

No woman can keep tab on a man, and find out where he goes, what he does, whom he meets, yet we are continually confronted by the spectacle of husbands and wives who are trying to do just that.

Their efforts amount to nothing. Their suspicions are simply boomerangs that fly back and annihilate them, for you cannot coerce affection. If your wife is true to you, if your husband is faithful to you, if your sweetheart is loyal to you, it is their free will offering, and not the result of your detective ability.

Justice is always painted blindfolded. Love should be pictured as blindfolded and gagged.

There are those who contend that jealousy is a proof of love, and that there can be no true love without jealousy. Women sometimes go a step further and feel flattered by a manifestation of jealousy. In reality, jealousy is either an insult or a sign of grovelling humility.

Jealousy is born of suspicion. No man is jealous of his sweetheart or his wife unless he believes her capable of committing the thing of which he accuses her.

If it turns him pea green and sulky for another man to talk to her or dance with her or call upon her, he proclaims his distrust of her.

If he had perfect confidence in her love and loyalty, he would glory in the admiration that she excited, for he would know that nothing on earth could sway her from her fealty to him.

When a woman looks with suspicion upon every other woman who comes near the man she loves, her jealousy is only the outward expression of the fact that she has no faith in his honor and truth.

Besides, jealous persons pay themselves the poor flattery of admitting that they doubt their ability to hold what they have won.

To be jealous is to tacitly acknowledge that you think other women are better looking, more agreeable, more charming, more attractive than you, or that other men are more fascinating, more magnetic and have qualities that appeal to the feminine heart that you do not possess.

If jealousy is its own torment, as lack of faith is its own undoing, and the lover who would be happy must obey the second commandment of love, which is:

TRUST ME ALL IN ALL, OR NOT AT ALL.

The woman who is always suspicious, distrustful and jealous will soon find her account overdrawn in the Bank of Affection.

*Advice to Anxious Sweetheart*s

By Beatrice Fairfax

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am nineteen years of age and have been keeping company with a young man of twenty-three for almost a year. He is uneducated, while I am a high school graduate and have a good position, and his profession is such that at times during the Summer months his work is unsteady. My father is very much against my going with this young man and I do not know his reasons therefor. I have spoken to him, but he will not tell me why he objects. I have heard from others, however, that it is on account of his education and unsteady work. This young man has asked me several times to become his wife; that is to say, in about three years, but I have never given him a definite answer. I believe he is sincere in his intentions, but I really don't know what to do. I have only one personal objection against the young man, so do not like to be unfair, for I think it is about time that I gave him a definite answer, as I do not want to keep on going with him in such an uncertain state of mind.

DOUBTFUL E.

I THINK your father's objections are most reasonable. He would be a very strange father if he were contented to see his daughter marry a man who could not support her. The young man has no right to ask you to marry him until he has steady work. I think you should tell him that you can't listen to his suit until he is in a position to support you.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am a woman of twenty-eight years of age and have been keeping company with a young man for about one year. Now he says he has no intention of getting married. Do you think I ought to waste my time on him, as I have no home and would like to settle down? All the presents he gave me were an umbrella and another present. Do you think I ought to ask him his intentions?

DESPONDENT READER.

THERE is not much use in wasting your time on him, as he evidently does not mean to marry. Do not dream of asking him his intentions. It would place you in a most humiliating, disagreeable position.

"BUT had you not better wait a day or two, and see if we cannot arrange it differently?"

"No, we had better not."

"I was thinking," Bruine went on, "that I might be able to do something with our young friend Menzies."

Darch frowned.

"That's no!" he exclaimed in exasperated fury. "I've done all I can. The girl has defied me. Armstrong has defied me. Well, it's my turn now, and, by Jupiter, I'm not going to spare them!"

"Which means," said Bruine quietly and very pointedly, "that you abandon all hope of mail Miss Armstrong Mrs. Morley Darch.

The latter winced. His ugly expression can only be his sallow, Asiatic face.

"And others," he said, with a sneer.

Fergus Bruine jerked his shoulders expressively.

"Nothing—nothing," he said; "only I have misconstrued your motives all along. That is all. I imagined that you would be to marry Miss Armstrong."

Above Anything Else on Earth.

I was mistaken. I now see that everything is subservient to your desire to ruin and disgrace her father. Is that not so?"

Darch nodded grimly.

"In other words," he said, and his voice sounded like the hiss of a snake, "I have a thirst for revenge."

CHAPTER CXXIV.

Dick's Letters.

THE Seafoam made a much longer stay than was at first contemplated. In the absence of Armstrong discovered that, after the exodus of those who had to hurry back, the rest of the happy party on board were in no hurry to go on, and many, indeed, asked their host if he would not delay the yacht for a few days.

Armstrong himself was only too willing. True, he had many things to call him back to Boston, but at the same time he dreaded to return.

Out here on board his beautiful yacht there was a sense of security, a long unknown danger lurked. He could not be called a coward, but, for all that, he felt that he was afraid to go back to Boston.

So it was that he willingly consented, and everyone, even including Elizabeth Armstrong and Mary, despite her promise to her fiance, was delighted.

"We sail for home on Saturday," Armstrong announced one morning, "so make the most of your remaining day."

And they did.

But it was ordained by the fates that the Seafoam was not to sail so soon, after all, for that day the perfect weather which had favored them without interruption during all the happy weeks of their cruise broke with a suddenness that astounded and appalled everyone. In the morning a fearful gale was raging, and the seas outside were running mountains high. Even in the sheltered harbor the yacht rolled most uncomfortably, and poor Mrs. Armstrong, who had not slept a wink all night, grew white with fear.

Captain Wise, who drew surveyed the weather and consulted his barometer, which was dropping ominously. He shook his grizzled head.

"This will never do," he said. "We must wait a bit."

"What do you think of it, Max?" asked Armstrong.

"As dirty as I've ever seen it, sir," answered the engineer of the Seafoam. "And with ladies aboard. No, sir."

"All right," said her owner. "I dare say nobody will be very sorry."

"Looks like lasting, sir, sir. Of course, if you like to take the risk, I'll take her out and see what it's like. We shall soon know when she gets her nose into it."

I'm Not Afraid.

of how aheift behave, but I was thinking, Armstrong, your pardon, sir, of Mrs. Armstrong."

"So was I," said the Soup King, smiling lugubriously.

"You're right, sir. I certainly advise you to wait."

"Certainly Mac. Let's see what the day brings forth. If we can't go to-morrow, I may have to leave you and go overland. However, we shall see."

And so it was arranged; and Elizabeth Armstrong breathed freely again. The prospect of going out to sea, to be tossed about by those giant waves, had paralyzed her with terror. Although, for the life of her, she would not let a soul know, Armstrong's gruff old friend read the storm-y day on shore, and in the evening they went up more to the theatre.

The gale blew up stronger again at night, and on Sunday McAlister would positively have refused to take the yacht out, ladies or no ladies.

All Sunday the bad weather continued, and on Monday the force of the gale somewhat abated, though huge seas were running outside.

Armstrong was very cheerful over it all, and kept the spirits of his guests up to a High Pitch.

"We've just got to amuse ourselves," he said, "and wait till the clouds roll by."

And so everyone was happy and contented.

Mary wrote every day to Dick Menzies, and told him of their doings. They were just friendly letters, such as she would have written to him if there had been nothing more than friendship existing between them. Dick wrote to her, too, and frequently rallied. He was impatient at her delay.

"I am so lonely," he wrote. "Do come back soon. It seems hundreds of years since I saw your dear face and heard your sweet voice."

When she read his long, passionate love-letters, her conscience smote her.

"Poor old Dick!" she said. "It is a shame! And I feel I am to blame. He was made to be loved and worshipped, and some day there will be a woman who will love and worship him; but it won't be I."

As a matter of fact, she missed his company very much, and frankly told him so in her letters. She did not tell him, however, that it would not have been a very great trial to her if she did not see him for several weeks, or months, for the matter of that, and that it was Stephen who was constantly in her mind, day and night.

"I think I must be a very wicked girl," she said to herself one day. When she had been going over the the whole position for the hundredth time in her mind. "I ought never to have promised to marry him, knowing that I Can Never Love Him.

It isn't fair to him, not even though I have told him plainly what I think, so that he can never turn to me after it is too late, and tell me he did not know, or that I was not absolutely, even brutally, frank with him.

It was on Sunday morning that she received a long letter from him, which contained some very startling news. She had cabled him on Friday that they sailed on the following day. It was in reply to that cable that he wrote. Her subsequent cable, telling him of the storm and their delay, had crossed his letter.

After telling her how glad he was that she was on her way home, and how he was counting every hour and minute to be at Port Seafoam to meet the yacht, he said:

"I am very worried about a certain thing, and wish I could see you to tell you all about it. I want to worry you while you are away, and I am such a cheesy coward that I should never be able to make myself clear. However, I feel I must have a shot at it. I have knocked up against that brute, Morley Darch, several times lately—at the Athenaeum and elsewhere. Try as I may, I cannot like him, and show him as plain as a pikestaff that I did not wish to cultivate his obnoxious acquaintance, the fellow would not leave me alone."

Mary caught her breath as she read. Of late she had managed to keep all thought of Morley Darch and his sinister threats, and that mysterious man Selwyn, or Rosine, out of her mind, and she had denied that her formal engagement to Captain Menzies had given her a sense of security, although at the same time, despite herself, however, that had in no way influenced her in accepting his proposal, although her father, in his heart of hearts, believed that it had; and certainly Mr. Fergus Bruine in Boston firmly believed that the iron-hearted girl had gave such surprising admiration to had thought better of her position and had followed her there.

"Darch," the letter went on, "not only got the cheapest me about whenever he can

NOTED ACTRESS AND ACTOR ARE TO BE MARRIED IN FALL

MISS BIJOU FERNANDEZ.

NOTED ACTRESS WHO IS SOON TO WED.

Miss Bijou Fernandez Is to become the Bride of William A. Abingdon.

Beautiful and talented Miss Bijou Fernandez, whose deep, sympathetic acting has won for her the appreciation of actors like the late Joseph Jefferson and managers like Charles Frohman, is to marry William A. Abingdon, a well-known actor. Miss Fernandez and her mother have just returned to Boston after several months' sojourn in England. While abroad they were visited by Mr. Abingdon. Mrs. Fernandez announced the engagement upon her return from abroad.

Bijou Fernandez has been on the stage most of her life. As a little girl she was a member of Joseph Jefferson's "Rip Van Winkle" company, playing the part of Little Wonder.

She came into great prominence during the first production of "Quo Vadis," where she played the leading role of Lygia. She played an engagement in this role at the Boston Theatre, and was seen here last season at the Colonial as a member of the all star revival of "The Two Orphans," taking her place alongside such sterling people of the stage as Clara Morris, Henry Jaines and Mrs. Le Moyne.

Mr. Abingdon has been with a number of well-known companies, and is known to theatregoers as an interpreter of "heavy" roles.

It is said that the marriage will take place in the Fall.

REFUSED DRINK; HAD TO RESIGN

SPRINGFIELD, July 12.—Rather than drink a glass of liquor in securing evidence against an Italian who was alleged to have been selling rum illegally, Reserve Officer John F. Donoghue has resigned from the police force.

City Marshal Stebbins ordered Donoghue to get evidence against the Italian, saying he would have to buy and drink liquor in the place. The officer replied that he had never taken a glass of rum in his life, and did not intend to begin. The marshal intimated to have insisted, and rather than obey the order Donoghue threw up his job. The honor was afterward raised and the occupant arraigned on a charge of selling liquor illegally.

BOYS SAVE DROWNING LAD

John Carter, ten years old, would have been drowned while swimming in Enright pond, Malden, but for the bravery of two companions, George Hickey and William Feiderman.

Carter was seized with cramps while half way across the pond, and called for help. The boys thought him fooling until he went down, and then Feiderman and Hickey swam to his assistance. Together they managed to get the boy to the shore, and revived him. Hickey is but twelve years old, and Feiderman thirteen, but both have a record for saving several lads from death while swimming.

DROWNS TRYING TO SAVE HAT

ESSEX, July 12.—Leaning over the edge of a boat to recover his hat, which a gust of wind had blown from his head, Antonio Leonardi, one of the best-known Italians of Boston, lost his baladee and fell into Lake Chebacco and was drowned.

Leonardi was attending a picnic of the Sons of Italy at Centennial Grove. With his little son he was rowing about the lake when his hat blew off. Even when struggling in the water his thoughts were of his son, who was leaning over the edge of the boat and in imminent danger of falling into the lake also. He warned the boy to keep still.

The body was recovered and physicians worked two hours without avail. They think fright killed Leonardi, as the body was hardly in the water long enough to have caused death by drowning. The dead man owned a restaurant at No. 213 North street, Boston.

NEEDLE 50 YRS. IN HER BODY

WORCESTER, July 12.—A needle that Mrs. Anna E. Blake, of No. 10 Shelby street, swallowed fifty years ago has been removed from her body by the use of a strong electrical magnet.

The sharp little piece of steel was swallowed when Mrs. Blake was but twelve years old and has since been working its way from her intestines to the surface of the skin. She complained of having pains in her side, and an X-ray examination showed that a hard, foreign substance was in her body.

Dr. Mary C. Darrell located the needle, and by the use of instruments and a magnet succeeded in getting it out of the body. Mrs. Blake's pain almost immediately ceased.

WIDOW OF 87 WEDS TO AVOID BEING MOVED

She Told Overseers That It Wouldn't Do Any Good, But They Came.

GROOM IS FIFTY YEARS OLD

Special to the Boston American.

EDGARTOWN, July 12.—Rather than be removed from the sea shore at the beginning of Summer to Taunton, where the Overseers of the Poor, who have been supporting her believed that her maintenance would cost less, Urania Cleveland, a widow eighty-seven years of age, quietly procured a marriage license, and when the offi[illegible]-2-to take her away from the ocean breezes they found that she had been married to Charles B. Pease.

The aged woman and her husband formerly resided at Taunton. After the death of her husband she was left penniless and being unable to earn her living she was compelled to rely upon the county for support. Her bills at this place last year amounted to $451.12. The county officials thought that was pretty high and concluded they could do it for less money in Taunton.

How They Got Fooled.

Some of the officials came out last week and told Mrs Cleveland that they proposed to move her.

"But I don't want to be moved," she said. "I am satisfied here and I'm going to stay here."

"Well come after you Friday," said the official.

"It won't do—you any good," retorted Mrs. Cleveland.

To-day one of the Overseers of the Poor called at the home of Charles B. Pease and asked for Mrs. Cleveland.

"There is no Mrs. Cleveland here," he was told.

"Oh, but there must be," he said. "I mean the old lady that we have been taking care of at this house."

"Maybe you refer to Mrs. Pease," replied a member of the household.

"Mrs. Pease—why, there isn't any Mrs. Pease."

"Why you haven't heard the news. Mr. Pease has just been married. Would you like to meet his bride?"

By a New Name.

The man was shown into a room. An aged woman sat sailing before him.

"Mrs. Cleveland," he began.

"Mrs. Pease, if you please," replied the bride.

And then the man was told how it happened. Suspecting that they would remove her even against her will she resolved to baffle them by becoming a bride, sold to baffle them by becoming a bride. She procured a license from the Taunton City Clerk, and Mr. Pease, who is fifty-three years old, got one from the town clerk at this place. Then they called in the Rev. Frederic T. Kenyon of the Baptist Church, and the ceremony was performed.

Mrs. Pease will remain in her pleasant home, and the Overseers of the Poor will not be required to pay any further attention.

WAVE DROWNS BOSTON BABY

LOS ANGELES, Cal., July 12.—The two-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles D. Johnson of Boston was snatched from the sand at Long Beach by a huge wave and swallowed out of sight. The body has not been recovered.

The Johnsons have Summer quarters in the Tent City at Long Beach. Mrs. Johnson, at the noon hour, took the little child to the shore and left it in a baby carriage safely out of reach of the breakers, as she thought.

Returning to her tent, Mrs. Johnson looked back and saw an enormous comber roll up on the beach and overturn the carriage. The mother rushed through the child and dragged it out of sight, and, although a score of people saw the tragedy, nothing could be done to save the child.

MISSING MAN WAS NAPPING

Robert Henderson of No. 1464 Dorchester avenue has returned to his home after enjoying a peaceful slumber in the Blue Hill woods, while the police and a number of Dorchester citizens were out searching for him.

Henderson has been under the care of a physician for the past five years, his ailment being a nervous trouble. While in a fit of temporary insanity he threatened to kill himself by cutting his throat. Mrs. Robert E. Hartsborn, his landlady, remonstrated with him, to which he replied: "Well, if I can't do what I want in my room, then I'll go to Dorchester Park." A couple of weeks ago he drank a small quantity of laudanum while suffering from temporary aberration.

VAN FOR MRS. HAVEMEYER

NEWPORT, R. I., July 12.—Mrs. Theodore A. Havemeyer, Jr., who recently underwent an operation at her home in Long Island, was brought to Newport in the steam yacht Sultana, and was conveyed to the home of her sister, Miss Anna Sands, in the dilapidated old police ambulance, which is now used for carrying sick and injured, as well as prisoners to and from the station, while the regular wagon is being repaired.

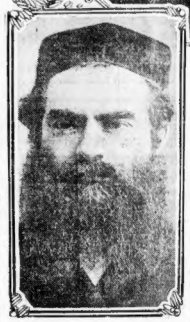
The wagon is a sight, but as all other hirages are in use at the time of her arrival it was found impossible to hire another temporary ambulance.

EDWARD HICKS, OF ASHLAND, MISSING

Mrs. Edward Hicks of Ashland has asked the Boston police to aid her in finding her husband, who disappeared last Wednesday. He passed the Fourth with friends on Warren place, and has not been seen since starting for home the following morning. He is forty years old, five feet tall and weighs about 140 pounds. He is of light complexion, with a heavy sandy mustache. He wore a dark suit and a brown soft hat.

RABBIS PROTEST AGAINST BAN ON WEDDING MUSIC

RABBI MOSES MARGOLIES



RABBI SOLOMON J. FRIEDERMAN

Prominent Hebrews Say It Is a Part of Their Marriage Ceremony.

TWO LEADING HEBREWS.

The greatest agitation exists among the Hebrews of this city over the prohibition of music by orchestra at Hebrew wedding, when held on Sundays, which is usually the case. The crusade was commenced by Captain "Bucky" O'Lalor of Station 5, and now the Hebrews are wondering whether all the police captains will attempt to enforce the rule. The Hebrews declare that music is as much a part of the marriage ceremony and subsequent festivities as choir and organ is at Christian church services. They declare they are being persecuted by the police, and are preparing to carry their grievances to the police commissioners.

Rabbi Moses Margolies of Salem street, one of the most noted members of the Orthodox church in this country, declares that it is persecution. He said to a BOSTON AMERICAN reporter to-day:

"My attention was first called to the prohibition of music at our weddings in the South End, when several musicians were hailed into court and fined for working on the Lord's day. Those musicians, of course, were paid. If the police would be fair about the matter, why don't they take into court the organists and choir soloists in the various Christian churches, who render music every Sunday and are paid for their services? To be consistent the police should do so, from my point of view.

"Police Action Arbitrary."

"The action of the police is not only arbitrary, but it seems to me that it is little short of persecution. The Italians and other nationalities hold their weddings and festivities on Sundays and have orchestras and bands, and why should the line be drawn against us? While I would not condescend to enter into any controversy about the action of the police, it seems to me that it is most illogical, unlitteris and unjust."

Rabbi Solomon Friederman, of No. 116 Salem street, is very much angered over the action of the police, as he officiated at the marriage ceremony in Concord Hall last Sunday night, where music was forbidden by order of Captain O'Lalor of Station 5.

The Rabbi declares that no Hebrew wedding ceremony is complete without the rendering of a selection known in Hebrew as "Vial Zemer," a kind of orchestral hymn which is always played.

"The action of the police I believe to be overdrawn and closely approaching the line of persecution," said the Rabbi. "Music forms a portion of the ceremony when the hymn "Vial Zemer" is played, and why the police should prohibit this I cannot understand.

Music Part of Ceremony.

"I don't object to the police declining to allow dance music, although, to be consistent, why don't they stop music at the weddings on Sundays of other nationalities? At a marriage ceremony in the Catholic church the organist, who is a paid musician, plays a wedding march as the bride passes down the aisle. As this is a part of the Catholic ceremony so is the playing of the hymn of the Hebrew ceremony.

"Then, again, the people of the working class cannot get home from work and prepare for a wedding ceremony in sufficient time, hence they have been in the custom of holding them on Sundays. Something should be done."

NEW YORK, July 12.—It is said that the man who induced John F. Wallace to leave his canal post is George Westinghouse, president of the Westinghouse Air Brake Company, who wanted the prestige of a man prominently identified with a large government undertaking, in a scheme to build electric lines to parallel steam railroads wherever, in any part of the country, there seems to be a chance for profitable competition. It was planned that every electric line built would be sold to a steam railroad at a handsome profit, a share to go to Mr. Wallace, who was guaranteed that his total income should not fall below $25,000.

Another phase of the scheme was to coerce existing electric lines paralleling steam roads and heavily engaged in competition into selling out to the Westinghouse corporation, on the promise that if they did not surrender another electric line would be built to divide the business.

People Are Saying That the July
is the handsomest magazine of its class in the world. Many go still further and say it is by far the best. That's what we have been aiming for—but having reached that point our efforts shall not cease. MoToR must remain the best.
Remarkable how widespread is the interest in Motoring. By no means is it confined to Motorists and dealers alone. Thousands upon thousands talk automobiles, talk of the races and routes and tours and tests of particular merits of this machine and that—though they themselves are not owners of motors.

The Point Is Right Here
To talk well one must have a rich and authentic source of information. There's for instance. MoToR tells all about Motoring—tells it interestingly by word and picture—fully, beautifully. MoToR is as welcome to the home it now visits as any other publication that goes there regularly, even though the others may antedate MoToR by many years.
New things are shown in machinery—new ideas are discussed—all that relates to motor cars and motor boats is covered comprehensively, intelligently in the July MoToR. Besides there are various articles and sketches in which women motorists will find pleasure and profit.
Buy MoToR to-day—at any news-stand—or ask us by mail to send it to you. Or if you really wish to keep well informed as to what's going on in motordom better have MoToR regularly.
HERE'S AN EASY WAY: Start now and send us $1, and we (Nat'l Magazine of Motoring, for 6 months (regular price $3 a year) and a copy of the Motor Car Handbook.
The Motor-Car Handbook explains fully, yet simply all types of motor cars and motor boats; it gives much every-day needed information pertaining to automobiles generally; it is helpful to the expert—indispensable to the novice.

HEARST'S BOSTON AMERICAN

WILLIAM RANDOLPH HEARST

80 AND 82 SUMMER ST., BOSTON, JULY 12, 1905.

Constitutions Are Mighty Convenient—

Especially When a Trust Wants to Enjoy a Good Laugh at the People

Mr. Rockefeller's Standard Oil was stealing from the people of Kansas in the usual way.

Kansas owned innumerable rich oil wells. But only Mr. Rockefeller could make money out of that oil—he owned the pipe lines and the refineries. If you didn't want to sell at his price, you couldn't sell your oil.

Mr. Rockefeller could say: "If you don't want to sell your oil to me at my price—why, DRINK it!"

So the great people of the great State put their funny little heads together and decided that they would rise in their might and fix things.

They decided that the State should build an oil refinery, giving the people the benefit of fair prices, destroying the Standard Oil monopoly, while adding to the wealth of the State and to the wealth of a great many individuals.

It seemed a pretty good idea, didn't it?

But Mr. John D. Rockefeller, with a smile, pulled one more card out of his sleeve and laid it on the table—that card was the Supreme Court of the State.

The Supreme Court was told by Mr. Rockefeller's well-paid lawyers that the citizens of Kansas actually proposed to build an oil refinery.

And the Supreme Court has just said to the people of the State: "You can't do that. It isn't CONSTITUTIONAL."

The joke is that, under this statement from the Supreme Court, the people actually CAN'T build their refinery.

Doesn't that give us an amusing insight into what happens to the people through their laws and their judges, when the men with the big pocketbooks are allowed to run things for a short time?

A farmer once bought a dog and put it in the smoke house to protect his hams.

He found a man loading his hams on a wagon to drive them away. The dog that he had bought to protect the hams bit the farmer when he tried to interfere.

The farmer then discovered that he had bought the dog from the thief.

This might suggest very distantly what happens to Uncle Sam when he takes the judges that interpret his laws from the offices of trust lawyers.

John D. Rockefeller says he has grown fat lately.

Do you wonder? Wouldn't anybody laugh enough to get fat if he found out that the people's own constitution could keep them from protecting themselves against highway robbery?

The Policeman, the Drunken Man and the Lost Child

How a Boston Bluecoat Illustrated a Common Truth About Human Nature

These things happened not far from the South Station. It wouldn't be fair, for two or three reasons, to say just how far. The writer of this saw them both.

A drunken man was staggering along the sidewalk, running into people.

He wasn't fighting, nor shouting, nor intentionally bothering anybody, but he was unable to care for himself, and it was certainly very well for the public that the policeman should see fit to arrest him and send him where he could recover from his intoxication and be able to walk without colliding with peaceable pedestrians.

A big policeman, much bigger than the drunken man, arrested him. The drunken man did not attempt to fight, but he hung back and muttered incoherently in his desire not to be arrested. Something of a crowd gathered.

The big policeman, when the other pulled back, choked him. The drunken man's hat fell off and he evidently wanted to stop for it. Then the policeman twisted his arm and thus dragged him to the patrol box, while he cried out with pain.

There were a good many mutterings in the crowd about the policeman, but he appeared not to hear them and delivered the drunken man into the hands of the officer in the patrol wagon, while somebody else threw the prisoner's hat in after him.

The policeman was much tougher than he needed to be, although the prisoner probably did not remember that when his fuddled brain cleared.

The scene left an impression on the spectators that is not good—an impression of a needless brutality, of a use of strength and power that was unnecessary.

Most of the men in the crowd had a pretty poor opinion of that policeman after the scene was ended.

All that was two or three months ago. A day or two ago another knot of people saw the same policeman, at the same place, under different circumstances.

He was standing at his corner, sweltering in his buttoned coat and heavy hemlet, when a little boy stepped up to him.

The boy was barelegged. He was dirty. Great circles of reddish pink about his eyes showed where his tears had washed his face.

"Mister Policeman," he said, "I'm lost. Can you tell me how to get to ——— street?"

The officer looked in his book. The street was three miles away. The boy was tired. He said his mother would worry. The policeman questioned him sharply for a minute. The boy's replies showed he was telling the truth. He said he could walk home, if he knew the way, but he didn't want to go to the police station.

Perhaps the big policeman has a little boy at home. Anyway, he reached down in his pocket and got a nickel, with which he paid the conductor of a passing car, after telling the lad ~~as~~ what street to get off.

Before the car came he bought the boy six cookies with another nickel, for the youngster hadn't eaten since breakfast, and it was 3 o'clock in the afternoon.

When the car had gone the policeman turned to the crowd that had watched. "Come, move along there," he said, exactly as he had said it when they muttered on the day of the drunken man's arrest.

If it is true that every editorial ought to point a moral, then this isn't much of an editorial, because it doesn't point much of a moral.

It is a sort of hot weather editorial, not too serious, that doesn't require much thinking. The lesson of the story of the big policeman is that no man is all good or all bad—a moral that is very well told in an old jingle that runs like this:

There's so much good in the worst of us,
And so much bad in the best of us,
That it doesn't become any of us
To talk about the rest of us.

AREN'T MEN THE WRETCHES?

1. MRS. SNOOKS—JOHN SNOOKS! That's the time I caught you! Something told me to come down to your office to-day. DETEIVER! I'll never trust you again.
MR. SNOOKS (aside)—Great Scott! I'm up against it this time sure.

2. MRS. SNOOKS—No! Don't try to explain. I caught you in the very act. I saw it with my own eyes.
MR. SNOOKS—But, my dear, please listen, just one moment. (Aside)—Heavens! What shall I say? How shall I explain it? By jove! A happy thought!

3. MR. SNOOKS—You see, it was this way, dear. It was reported to me that one of my most trusted clerks frequented that drinking place every day at this hour. To see for myself, I went into the place and found the report untrue. You know I wouldn't have any one in my employ who drank liquor.

4. MRS. SNOOKS—Oh, John, please forgive me for being so suspicious; but the thing looked so self-evident. We women can't realize how watchful over his employees a business man must be.
MR. SNOOKS (aside)—Oh, how fortunate is the man with a quick and active mind.

HAPPENINGS IN BUGVILLE

SUSIE BUG—Oh, Harold! Wouldn't it be awful if mamma saw me sitting on the arm of your chair?

BUG—Hey, come back here. You'll have to pay for breaking this plate-glass window!

BUG SOLDIER—Gee! I don't mind going to war, but I've got to kick on carrying along this token!

Mr. BUG—Confound it! I'm late now. Where in the deuce is that collar button?

Our World Is Only a Speck to the Sun

By Prof. Garrett P. Serviss

THERE was a time when man thought himself so important a part of creation that he would not listen to science when it told him that the earth on which he lived was only a satellite of the sun.

That statement outraged his sense of his own dignity. Had not theology assured him that he was the favorite creature of the Almighty—though somewhat under a cloud for bad conduct?

But science has small regard for personal dignity and at last man had to acknowledge that science was right and that the earth truly is a very small affair, hardly a speck in the eye of the mighty sun, which lights it as indifferently as a great beacon, shooting its rays over the ocean, shines upon a bewildered insect circling in its glare.

Then self-sufficient man invented a new fable to magnify his imaginary importance. Since he had to recognize the supremacy of the sun over the earth he persuaded himself that the sun must be far greater than any of the stars.

How otherwise could it have been honored with the duty of making daylight for man? So theology got its second wind and dignity was restored to the favorite of the Almighty.

But, alas! Science, which never rests, for progress is its very nature, lifted another curtain in the cosmos, and presently man found himself pushed again from his fancied throne.

He had to confess that the sun holds but a petty rank among the stars, that thousands of the orbs glittering in the deeps of space are incomparably its superiors, and that if the whole solar system were suddenly snuffed out of existence the universe would not know that it had suffered any loss.

Yet even this is not the end of the humiliation which science is inflicting upon self-conceited man.

At least, he thought, the solar system represents the universal type, and if all those stars are suns they must be attended by satellite worlds, built upon the plan of this one.

Once more he was mistaken. Again his ideal, growing out of the overweening sense of his own importance, has been shattered.

One of the latest discoveries of science is that the sun and its system no more form a type for the whole universe than a sunach brush forms a type for the forest giants surrounding it.

For many years, as telescopes increased in power, the hope grew that some time we should be able to see planets attending the stars. But instead of obedient little planets like the earth, what we are really beginning to detect among the stars is sets of suns—pairs, quadrifles, groups, clusters—many involved in marvellous wreaths of glowing nebulosity.

What man once vainly imagined of the sun, that the dull earth was its master, proves to be, in a sense, true of some of the great suns of distance space.

A most notable example has recently been discovered among the stars of Pegasus. The star numbered in our charts 85 in that constellation is a binary sun. Its two components together exceed our sun about eleven times in mass.

One of them is a hundred times as bright as its companion, and yet the faint companion is much the more massive of the two. It weighs as much as seven suns like ours, while the other weighs only as much as four in this case, then, the body that gives the least light sways with its gravitation a neighbor which is a hundred times brighter!

And this is not the only known instance of its kind. In the great quadruple system of Castor it appears that the faintest star of the six is the gravitational master of its comrades.

The wonderful variable Algol has a perfectly dark and opaque companion almost as large as itself. The brilliant Sirius has an attendant half as massive as itself, though ten thousand times less bright.

So man must adjust his ideas again to fit the facts. But in the end he need feel no humiliation, but rather exultation, because he has sufficient intelligence to get even an inkling of the incomprehensible truth.

He has belittled himself often enough by playing the fly upon the wheel or imagining that he and his petty affairs constitute the synosure of the supernal powers. Science is teaching him to find his true dignity in the unprejudiced search for knowledge.

"And Then Brought Out His Daughter, Who Had Reached the Age of Two"

By Wex Jones

THE Kansas fields were full of wheat a waiting to be shorn;
The farmer he was full of grief, and partly full of corn.

A score of harvest hands he watched go toiling in the sun;
Some came from Eastern colleges—all strangers, every one.

The farmer watched his new-hired help mixed up with all his wheat:
"They call 'em hands," he muttered, "but they're more like tenderfeet.

"The rain may come and spoil my crop; some plan I must devise
To make these fellows rustle for an inexpensive price."

A thought then struck the farmer, and he staggered from the blow.
Then called the hands around him and he thusly let her go:

"I have a lovely daughter, and the peacherino miss
On the man who works the hardest will bestow a hug and kiss."

The men wired in like madmen; some fainted from the heat;
Some worked their hands to splinters but they put away the wheat.

They worked all day, and didn't pause to eat their waiting dinner,
And at the end Bill Sluggine was acclaimed an easy winner.

The farmer led him to the house along went all the crew,
And then brought out his daughter who had reached the age of two.

They say that tired as Sluggine was the fight was mighty warm;
However that may be, just now an orphan owns the farm.

Keep thy shop and thy shop will keep thee. Light gains make heavy purses.

Why Women Grow Rusty

By Caroline

THAT life is growing more bearable for women, even the worst of croakers will allow.

There are now only a few who think it unseemly for a woman to go out and earn her daily bread.

But there are still a few men who assert in a most patronizing, kindly, superior, don't-argue-with-me manner that the woman's place is the home, and that the ideal woman is that sweetly domestic creature who stays at home and cooks the food and minds the children.

This is all very well as far as it goes, but it doesn't go very far when there is no food to be cooked and no children to be looked after.

A woman's place is the home if she has one, but if she hasn't there's nothing especially commendable in staying in some one else's home and being dependent on some one else for her bread and butter. That isn't being womanly. That is merely weak.

The embittered "old maid" of a few years ago has well-nigh passed from the horizon. Why? Not because more women marry, but because women have more to do and think about. They haven't the time to sit at home and become embittered.

Formerly there was a much larger number of women than men in the lunatic asylums, and only because women's lives were so much duller than men's were they satisfied with their routine, even though it led to the asylum.

Of late, however, the number of women inmates in the asylums has decreased. And the doctors agree that this is because they have found more outlets for their energies.

They have work to do which really counts and amusements which really divert.

Until recently it had been generally conceded that a woman of fifty is much older than a man of the same age and that the rust appeared on her much earlier.

The only way to keep off the rust is by constant polishing, and a man has always better opportunities for doing this.

But there are some beautiful, shining exceptions even now to this rule, and there are likely to be more.

Mrs. Mary Livermore has just died at the age of eighty-four, keen and alert to the last.

Susan B. Anthony, who is also eighty-four, is still deeply interested in the cause of woman's suffrage.

And Clara Barton, though she is seventy years of age, carried relief to the sufferers in the Galveston disaster.

And this only goes to show it is possible to be useful at any age, and that to grow rusty should not be peculiar to any sex.

The best way for both men and women to keep their youth is to have some interest beyond themselves.

They can play a useful part just as long as they choose to hold a hand.

It is only when they let go that they ~~y~~ou~~n~~g cease them old and useless.
